PREFACE.

PLINY'S LETTERS have hitherto been known to school-boys chiefly by selections. The present edition is issued with the object of encouraging a more consecutive and systematic study of an author who deserves more attention than he has as yet received. ~~From a linguistic point of view the letters are most instructive, and they also throw a flood of light on Roman life and society during the first century of the empire.~~

The notes have been written chiefly for the higher forms in schools, but they will be found sufficiently advanced, I think, for students at the University.

In preparing this book I have consulted the following editions:—Catanaeus (1506), Cortius and Longolius (1734), Gierig (1800), Gesner and Schaefer (1805), and Döring (1843). On grammatical points I have received considerable help from Kraut (Ueber Syntax und Stil des jüngeren Plinius, 1872), and Geucke (De usu Conjunctionum et modorum apud Plinium minorem, 1872). Wensch's Lexici Pliniani Specimen (1837 and 1839) has also been found useful as far as it goes. It would be well for Plinian scholarship if some one could find the leisure to complete the work begun by Wensch.

For the life and-chronology I am especially indebted, like all modern editors of Pliny, to Mommsen's exhaustive article in Hermes III. (1868). A French translation of the article by C. Morel (1873), containing Dr. Mommsen's latest additions and corrections, has also been consulted. Masson's C. Plinii Secundi junioris vita (1709), and Wilh. Gemohl De temporum ratione in Plinii Epistularum IX. libris observata (1872) have been of considerable service.

The plan of Pliny's Laurentinian Villa was drawn after consulting Castell's Villas of the Ancients (London, 1728). Castell's plans are too elaborate, and perhaps the one I give is also open to that charge. But if it serves to present a fairly definite picture to the student's mind, my object will be gained, and the reader who is not satisfied with it will have at least a groundwork on which to raise his own Laurentinum.

I have followed mainly, but not exclusively, the text of Keil's larger edition (1870).

My thanks are due to Mr. S. Dill, late High Master of the Manchester Grammar School, and the Rev. W. Y. Fausset of Fettes College, Editor of Cicero pro Cluentio, for having read the proof-sheets of the Notes, and made important corrections and suggestions.

INTRODUCTION.

LIFE OF PLINY THE YOUNGER.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, as he is usually called, to distinguish him from his uncle the naturalist, was born at Comum on the Lake Larius. From an inscription¹ we learn that his original name was Publius Caecilius Secundus. He appears to have had an elder brother who must have died early, and of whom we know nothing, except that his name was Lucius Caecilius Valens. The same inscription shows that the name of Pliny's father was L. Caecilius Cilo, and that he had been IIII. vir aedilicia potestate at Comum, that he made a bequest to the citizens of Comum,² and that he died young. The Caecilii had evidently been long established in Comum, probably from 59, B.C., when under Caesar's conduct a large accession of colonists was settled there. This is confirmed by the well-known lines of Catullus, 35, poetae tenero, meo sodali, velim Caecilio, papyre, dicas Veronam veniat, Novi relinquens Comi moenia Lariumque litus.

² Compare also I. 8, 5.

Pliny's mother's family, the Plinii, also belonged to Comum, and Suetonius, in his life of her brother, Pliny the Elder, expressly calls him Novocomensis. Besides this there are at Comum numerous inscriptions in reference to the Plinii, and Pliny himself speaks of materna praedia situated on the Lacus Larius which he inherited.¹

Pliny's father evidently belonged to the municipal nobility, and, according to Suetonius,² his maternal uncle was of Equestrian rank. Thus he was well born on both sides, and when he speaks of leaving to any children he may have *non subitas imagines*³ he, no doubt, means that he is not altogether a parvenu.

The date of Pliny's birth is fixed for us by himself. He tells us⁴ that he was in his eighteenth year at the time of the famous eruption of Vesuvius. This, as we learn chiefly through Dion Cassius, took place on the 24th August, A.D. 79. Pliny therefore was born in the second half of 61, or the first half of 62, A.D. On the death of his father he became ward of the famous Verginius Rufus.⁵ His mother, with her son, appears to have taken up her residence under the same roof with her brother, Pliny the Elder, who in the latter years of Nero's tyranny had forsaken Rome and public life, and sought the peaceful security and literary leisure of Comum. In Pliny's boyhood, and indeed long after, there were no schools at Comum,¹ none nearer than Milan, but doubtless the want was supplied by his uncle's care, and by the employment of good private tutors. That he was well instructed, and early showed his appreciation of learning, is evident from the fact that at the age of fourteen he wrote a Greek tragedy.² His later opinion of this juvenile production may be gathered from his own words, tragoediam scripsi. qualem? inquis. nescio. tragoedia vocabatur. In his peaceful native town Pliny spent his boyhood, while the Roman world outside was being shaken to its foundations. His boyhood witnessed from afar the reigns of Nero, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, undisturbed by all the horror and bloodshed of that time. It was only when Vespasian was firmly settled on the throne that Pliny the Elder returned to Rome, accompanied, or soon after followed, by his nephew, who was there to finish his studies and fit himself for public life. He attended the lectures of the rhetorician Nicetes Sacerdos,³ and also those of the famous Quintilian,⁴ who was for many years the most eminent professor of eloquence at Rome, and was honoured by Domitian with the consulship. During these early years at Rome Pliny still enjoyed the advantage of his uncle's society and guidance, by whose literary tastes and marvellous industry he must have been greatly influenced. But, at last, in August 24th, 79, A.D., an event happened which was to sever them for ever. At this time Pliny was living with his uncle and his mother near Misenum, his uncle being in command of the fleet which was stationed there. Then took place the eruption of Vesuvius, which destroyed Herculaneum and Pompeii, and in which the elder Pliny lost his life, partly through his desire for knowledge, and partly through his anxiety to save life. The two famous letters of Pliny to Tacitus¹ contain a full account of his uncle's death, and give a vivid picture of that terrible scene. By the elder Pliny's will his nephew became his adopted son. Up to this time his full name had been P. Caecilius, L. F. Secundus. By strict republican usage he should now have been called C. Plinius, C. F. Secundus Caecilianus. But under the empire there was a relaxation of this rule, and Pliny now took the name C. Plinius, L. F. Caecilius Secundus; that is, he abandoned his praenomen, and placed his old gentile name among his cognomina, taking the praenomen and nomen of his adoptive father.² By his contemporaries

he is sometimes called Plinius, but more frequently (always in Trajan's letters) Secundus. In the headings of his own letters he is usually C. Plinius, but this designation may, as Mommsen suggests, have been introduced by the grammarians on the analogy of M. Tullius.

Within a year after his uncle's death, Pliny, for the first time, appears as a pleader.¹ Shortly afterwards, the precise date we cannot specify, he became one of the decemviri stlitibus iudicandis. Then followed the necessary military probation, and in 81 or 82 he was appointed, probably by Domitian, military tribune to the Legio III. Gallica, then stationed in Syria. Like other tribuni militares honores petituri, he could have seen no proper military service, and probably his service was nothing more than the ordinary semestris militia. We know that the Governor of Syria employed him in the accountant's office, an experience which was no doubt valuable to him when he himself became a provincial governor. During his residence in Syria, Pliny found time to cultivate the friendship of the philosophers Euphrates and Artemidorus.²

On his return to Rome³ he was nominated sevir

² The passages relating to Pliny's residence in Syria are I. 10, 2; III. 2, 5; VII. 31, 2; VIII. 14, 7; X. 87 (19).

equitum Romanorum. Of this office, as of his decemvirate, Pliny makes no express mention, and it seems to have been merely an ornamental sinecure. The next step in the ladder of promotion was the quaestorship. But Pliny could not hold this before he was twenty-five years old.¹ The interval of waiting was spent in forensic work in the Court of the Centumviri, which sat in the Basilica Julia. This Court was Pliny's youthful arena, where he won his first case, and he continued to plead in it long after he had risen to eminence.²

Pliny was quaestor probably from June 1st, 89, till May 31st, 90, having already exceeded the minimum age, which may have been due to the great competition for the office. At any rate, he seems not to have been kept back for want of influence, and he enjoyed the privilege on the present occasion of being quaestor Caesaris, having been nominated by Domitian himself. After the quaestorship, a full year had to elapse before the tribunate could be held. Exception might be made to this rule if the candidate enjoyed the ius trium liberorum. As Pliny did not possess this privilege, he must have waited the statutable year, and thus we may date his tribunate as lasting from December 10th,

91, to December 9th, 92. At this time the tribunate had lost all its former influence, the tribunicia potestas of the Emperor completely overshadowing the annual holders of the office. It had, in fact, become an inanis umbra et sine honore nomen. Pliny, however, was disposed to regard it in a different light, and consequently abstained from pleading during his tribunate, wishing not to expose a sacrosancta potestas to the heated atmosphere of forensic debate.¹

Pliny's praetorship may be placed in the year 93. About it he tells us nothing, except that he celebrated the usual games, the ludi Circenses.² As Mommsen suggests, his praetorship resembled that of Agricola, as described by Tacitus; ³—idem praeturae tenor et silentium; nec enim iurisdictio obvenerat: ludos et inania honoris medio rationis et abundantiae duxit. But, if noted for nothing else, Pliny's praetorship is important for the fact that it was during his term of office he conducted his first great criminal prosecution before the Senate. In conjunction with Herennius Senecio, who was a native of Baetica, he appeared on behalf of the Baetici, to prosecute their late proconsul Baebius Massa. Massa was found guilty, and his property ordered to be held in custody of the State, and Pliny tells us that he was warmly complimented for his conduct of the case by the future Emperor, Nerva, who was present.⁴

But now a change was coming over Domitian, and there began that time of murder, exile, and confiscation, which was to deprive Pliny of so many of his friends. Herennius Senecio, Arulenus Rusticus, and Helvidius Priscus were put to death, while Junius Mauricus, the brother of Arulenus, and noble women, such as Gratilla, and Arria the daughter and Fannia the grand-daughter of Caecina Paetus and the elder Arria, were sent into exile. So many thunderbolts were falling round him that Pliny felt himself scorched by them, and augured from certain signs that a similar fate was impending over himself.¹ He tells us that after Domitian's death an information against him by the informer Metius Carus was found among the Emperor's papers.² In the Panegyric³ he says, cursu quodam provectus ab illo insidiosissimo principe, antequam profiteretur odium bonorum, postquam professus est, substiti; and he goes on to say that he preferred the longer road to office rather than the short cuts which he might have taken by becoming a delator or a minion of the tyrant. There is no doubt that Pliny's gentle and refined nature would have made him shrink from office at this time, but it is just possible that in the above words he depreciates Domitian too much before Trajan. For it is evident that the former Emperor, in the midst of his worst excesses, did not neglect Pliny; for he appointed him to the praefectura aerarii militaris, an office tenable for three years, which Pliny must have held either from 94 to 96, or from 95 to 97. Domitian, in fact, had too quick an eye and too great a regard for a man of Pliny's ability not to avail himself of his services in the State.

In A.D. 96, Domitian was assassinated, and Nerva's accession brought some relief to the wearied state. The exiles were recalled, and now came the time for vengeance on Domitian's tools. Pliny proceeded in 97 to impeach Publicius Certus who had taken an active part in the death of Helvidius Priscus. The impeachment was not successful except so far that Certus was deprived of his expected consulship.¹ Afterwards Pliny embodied his speech against Certus in a book, under the title of Libri de ultione Helvidii.² A few days after its publication Certus died, a coincidence which Pliny hints was not the result of chance. For it was said that Certus was haunted by the image of his prosecutor, which threatened him with a sword; and it would be well for the sake of justice, adds Pliny, that such a report should be believed to be true.³ Just before this trial, perhaps at the end of 96 or the beginning of 97, Pliny had lost his second wife, daughter of the wealthy Pompeia Celerina,⁴ and in the year 97 he lost his friend Corellius Rufus, who starved himself to death,¹ and also his famous guardian Verginius Rufus who, after thrice refusing the imperial purple, died full of years, having lived long enough to hear his praises sung by posterity.²

All this time Pliny was still holding the praefectura aerarii militaris, and, according to our chronology, his time should expire in 96 or 97. In 98, along with Cornutus Tertullus, he was appointed by Nerva³ to the praefectura aerarii Saturni. It was evidently a higher office than the war treasury, being held after it. There is no example except this to be found of these two offices having been held in succession by the same individual, and this circumstance and the fact that he held the second prefecture so long prove, as Mommsen says, that Pliny must have shown a special aptitude for finance. The duties of the office must have been arduous,⁴ and he devoted the greater part of his time to them, giving up even his legal work.⁵ But about the end of 98 the Africans asked him to appear for them against their late proconsul Marius Priscus. The trial took place in 100, A.D., and ended in the condemnation of Marius.⁶ Before the end of this trial Pliny must have been nominated by Trajan to the consulship, for his colleague in the praefectura aerarii, and also in

was a woman of cultivated tastes, and seems to have been as devoted to Pliny as he was to her. We have ~~three of his~~ letters to her extant,¹ couched in the most affectionate language, which read as fresh as if they had been written yesterday. Pliny's third wife survived him, and although anxious for a family he had no children by any of his marriages, but as a compensation Trajan had, in the year after the death of his second wife, 98, A.D., bestowed on him the ius trium liberorum.

If we accept Mommsen's chronology, Pliny's praefecture of the treasury, which, being a triennial office, would have expired in A.D. 100, was prolonged for another year. He had got leave from the Emperor to absent himself from the duties of this office in August 101, in order to visit his estate at Tifernum,² and while he was absent a deputation from the province of Baetica asked the senate that Pliny should appear for them against their late proconsul Caecilius Classicus.³

Pliny was reluctant to undertake another prosecution of a senator, but as Classicus had meanwhile died, he consented, reflecting that success in his advocacy could no longer affect the accused, and that, after consenting to undertake this third prosecution, he could the more easily refuse to undertake any similar case in the future.¹ After a long trial several of the accomplices of Classicus were found guilty and punished.² It is an interesting fact that the notorious Marius Priscus who had pillaged Africa was a native of Baetica, and that Classicus the spoiler of Baetica was a native of Africa, and that the Baetici consoled themselves amid their misfortunes by the grim jest "dedi malum et accepi."³

In 103 or 104 Pliny received the augurate in succession to Sex. Julius Frontinus, who had himself for several consecutive years nominated him for that priesthood.⁴ For the same priesthood he had also been repeatedly nominated by Verginius Rufus.⁵ In the year 105 he received the office of curator alvei Tiberis et riparum et cloacarum urbis,⁶ an office held only by a man of consular rank. This was the last public post which Pliny held at Rome, and his old colleague Cornutus, whose advancement was almost parallel with Pliny's, held at the same time the post of curator Aemiliae viae.⁷

After being relieved of the praefecture of the treasury, Pliny gave more time to his practice in the Centumviral Court. He seems, however, to have been gradually becoming disgusted with the degenerate tone of the Court, and to have been contemplating early retirement.¹ We find him taking part in two other famous trials before the Senate, that of Julius Bassus,² and that of Rufus Varenus,³ both proconsuls of Bithynia. In each of these cases Pliny appears not for the provincials, but for the defendants, a more congenial task to a Senator, and one in which the advocate was sure to do his very best. In both cases he was successful, and there is no doubt that in his conduct of them he gained a very exact knowledge of the affairs and the condition of Bithynia. He had already shown himself an exceptionally good administrator, especially during his long tenure of the praefecture of the treasury. Accordingly when, probably in 111 A.D., Trajan, perhaps as a result of the aforementioned trials, resolved to reorganise the province of Bithynia, he appointed Pliny imperial legate, giving him authority to reform all abuses, financial or otherwise.⁴ Pliny's governorship, in fact, partook of the character of a confidential mission. The particulars of his career in Bithynia can be learnt from the letters to Trajan. We cannot tell how long his governorship lasted, except that it lasted longer than a year. In 113 A.D., the correspondence with Trajan suddenly ceases, Pliny being still in Bithynia, and making no allusion to returning home. Here all our information comes to an end. Whether he returned to die in Italy, or whether he died in his province, is a matter only of conjecture. We know that his constitution was not robust, and it is probable that he succumbed to the climate of Bithynia.

We have hitherto spoken chiefly of Pliny's public life; ~~but we possess ample material to form a vivid picture of his private life and character.~~ He was rich, ~~possessing property in the neighbourhood of Comum,~~ including two villas on the shores of Lake Larius, called by him respectively "Tragedy" and "Comedy."¹ He had a ~~large estate~~ in Etruria, near the town of Tifernum Tiberinum,² which municipality had made him its patron while he was still a boy.³ From this last estate he tells Trajan that he derived an income of 400,000 sesterces.⁴ Then there were his famous Laurentine Villa, which he so minutely describes,⁵ and other villas at Tusculum, Tibur, and Praeneste.⁶ Most of Pliny's property was in land,⁷ and we know that his revenues occasionally suffered through agricultural depression; but that he never was in other than affluent circumstances is evident from his acts of public and private liberality. ~~To his native Comum his generosity was as constant as his affection.~~ At the cost of 1,000,000 sesterces he built there a public library, and gave 100,000 sesterces more, from the interest on which the library was to be maintained.¹ Furthermore, finding that there was no school at Comum, and that boys had to be sent away to Milan to be educated, he engaged to pay one third of the salary of a qualified teacher, and would have paid the whole had he not believed that it was wrong to relieve the parent of his responsibility. "Where," says he, "could boys pass their time more pleasantly than in their own district, or be subject to more virtuous control than under the eye of their parents, or be reared more cheaply than at home?"² These words and acts of Pliny are of special interest at the present day, when the movement in favour of local education is spreading, and the public school system of England is not without its adverse critics.

Pliny also provided a capital sum of 500,000 sesterces for the education of the boys and girls of free-born parents in Comum.³ By will he also left a sum of money to establish baths in Comum, and also a further sum for their outfit and maintenance. The great inscription to Pliny's memory, which was transported in the middle ages to Milan, and a copy of which we subjoin, formerly adorned these baths. From this inscription we learn that he also left 1,866,666 sesterces for the maintenance of his own freedmen, on whose death the money was to go to the townsfolk for a public entertainment. At Tifernum also, of which place, as we have said, he was a patron, he built, at his own expense, and dedicated a temple with statues of the Emperors, including Nerva and Trajan.¹

Besides these instances of Pliny's public munificence we have numerous examples of his private beneficence. He was ever ready to help a friend, whether by money or by influence. To his friend Romatius Firmus he ~~gave 300,000 sesterces~~ to qualify him for equestrian rank.² Again, he bought up all the debts of Calvina's deceased father, thus becoming sole creditor, and then cancelled them, enabling the daughter to enter on an unencumbered inheritance.³ To Artemidorus the philosopher, when embarrassed, at the time when Domitian expelled all the philosophers from Rome, he lent, without interest, a considerable sum of money, visiting the philosopher's house at a time when intercourse with such a man was dangerous.⁴ He also gave pecuniary aid to the poet Martial,⁵ and gave his old tutor Quintilian 50,000 sesterces as a marriage portion for his daughter.⁶ We find him also promoting the interests of his friends in other ways; thus he asks Trajan to admit Voconius Romanus to senatorial rank,⁷ and begs the same

Of many of Pliny's friends notices will be found throughout this work. He seems to have had a peculiar aptitude for winning friendship. He was generous, free from envy, a man of many interests and of wide-reaching sympathies, sympathies not confined merely to friends of good social position, but embracing poorer and humbler individuals. Witness his care for his freedman Zosimus, whom he sent for the sake of his health to stay for a time on the estate of his friend Paullinus at Forum Julii (Fréjus),² the Riviera being apparently then, as now, a sanatorium for consumptives. Indeed we have enough evidence to show that Pliny treated all the members of his household with like consideration and indulgence.³

His official career at Rome did not prevent him from giving full play to his literary tastes. According to himself, he was one of the first to establish the custom of reciting one's own speeches to a circle of friends before publication.⁴ He also, as we have said, essayed poetic composition.⁵ He had a thorough appreciation of literary merit in others, was always ready to encourage the struggling writer, and never jealous of the successful one. His praises of sequence. This was the prevailing view until in 1868 it was traversed by Mommsen who, aided by additional epigraphical and other research, concludes that the books are in strict chronological order, and that the letters in each book are pretty nearly so, the exceptions being unimportant. The following are some of the points maintained by Mommsen:—

1. The words non servato, etc., were simply intended to give a stamp of agreeable negligence to a collection which had undoubtedly been edited with the greatest care. In any case the words prove nothing, for the books may have been published separately,¹ and the words may only refer to the first book.

2. All the letters which treat of the same subject, or which bear sufficient traces of being contemporary, are found either in the same book or in two consecutive books.

¹ It was a common practice in Rome to publish in succession the different books of a whole work; take for instance the cases of C. Fannius (Pliny V. 5.), and of the poet Martial. The words at the end of Pliny's Preface, ita fiet ut eas quae adhuc neglectae iacent requiram, et si quas addidero, non supprimam, seem to point to a similar procedure on Pliny's part. There are also traces of this in the letters. Thus in his letter to Cremutius Ruso (IX. 19.) Pliny says, significas legisse te in quadam epistula mea. The letter here referred to is VI. 10. We may therefore infer that when he wrote IX. 19. the sixth book had probably been published.

3. When we find couples or groups of letters of which the chronological order can be established, that order corresponds absolutely with the order of the books.

4. The letters with reference to Pliny's marriages and marriage relationships show a similar chronological consistency. He was married three times, twice under Domitian, and his second wife, step daughter of Vettius Proculus, and daughter of Pompeia Celerina, died in 97, A.D. Now in the first three books no mention is made of this wife, but only of his rich mother-in-law, Pompeia, and later on this connection ceases. In the fourth book we find Pliny remarried, to all appearance recently, to Calpurnia, and she and her grandfather Calpurnius Fabatus and her paternal aunt Hispulla frequently appear in the subsequent books.

5. Throughout the letters we find the circle of Pliny's correspondents and friends gradually modified. As we advance towards the later books the older men who figured in the earlier books gradually disappear, while the younger men who figure in the later books do not do so in the earlier ones. Friends of the same age as Pliny himself appear throughout all the books.

Mommsen then proceeds to analyse each separate book, and concludes that the first appeared probably in 97, the second 100, the third 101, the fourth 105, the fifth and sixth 106, the seventh 107, the eighth and ninth (perhaps published together) not before 108 or 109.

Wilh. Gemohl, De temporum ratione in Plinii epistularum ix. libris observata (Halle 1872), differs in many particulars from Mommsen. With reference to the chronology of books I. and II. his conclusions are:—

I. 2-4	belong to the year	96
I. 5-12	}	97

The letters between these two last, that is letters 14-19, were, says Gemohl, agreeing with Stobbe,¹ thrown in to make up the book, perhaps to make the second book as large as the first. Gemohl thinks that the preface refers to the first two books and not to the whole nine.

Although we have no direct testimony to that effect, there can be little doubt that all the nine books of the letters were edited by Pliny himself. The care with which, on every occasion, topics compromising at the time are avoided, the studied omission in many cases of the names of people with whom he finds fault,¹ and the uniform delicacy of touch which characterises the collection could hardly have been shown by a posthumous editor.

INSCRIPTIONS RELATING TO PLINY.

There exist altogether five inscriptions relating to Pliny, all of which are collected by Mommsen in his article in Hermes. We give the two most important:—

The first was discovered at Fecchio, a small village not far from Comum. Later it was transferred to Milan in the Archinti collection, with which it subsequently passed into the museum known by the name of Brera.

The second is the great inscription which once adorned the walls of the Thermae which Pliny gave to Comum. The marble slab was discovered in Milan, and had got broken into six pieces, four of which were built into a tomb in the Church of St. Ambrose. These four fragments subsequently disappeared, and it was only in 1858 that the first fragment was re-discovered in the church of St. Ambrose. By the aid of this fragment and various written records Mommsen has reproduced the complete inscription as given above.

C. PLINI CAECILI SECUNDI
EPISTULARUM
LIBER PRIMUS.

I.

C. PLINIUS SEPTICIO SUO S.

Preface.

Frequenter hortatus es ut epistulas, si quas paulo 1 curatius scripsissem, colligerem publicaremque. collegi non servato temporis ordine (neque enim his-toriam conponebam), sed ut quaeque in manus venerat. superest ut nec te consilii nec me paeniteat 2 obsequii. ita enim fiet ut eas quae adhuc neglectae iacent requiram, et si quas addidero, non supprimam.

C. PLINIUS ARRIANO SUO S.

Pliny sends a speech to Arrianus for correction, explaining his style of composition, and telling him what men he has imitated.

Quia tardiozem adventum tuum prospicio, librum 1

quem prioribus epistulis promiseram exhibeo. hunc rogo ex consuetudine tua et legas et emendes, eo magis, quod nihil ante peraeque eodem stilo scripsisse
2 videor. temptavi enim imitari Demosthenen semper tuum, Calvum nuper meum, dumtaxat figuris orationis: nam vim tantorum virorum “pauci quos 3 aequus amavit” adsequi possunt. nec materia ipsa huic, vereor ne inprobe dicam, aemulationi repugnavit: erat enim prope tota in contentione dicendi, quod me longae desidiaie indormientem excitavit, si modo is
4 sum ego qui excitari possim. non tamen omnino Marci nostri ληκύθους fugimus, quotiens paulum itinere decedere non intempestivis amoenitatibus admonebamur: acres enim esse, non tristes vole-
5 hamus. nec est quod putes me sub hac exceptione veniam postulare. nam quo magis intendam limam tuam, confitebor et ipsum me et contubernales ab editione non abhorrere, si modo tu fortasse errori
6 nostro album calculum adieceris. est enim plane aliquid edendum, atque utinam hoc potissimum quod paratum est! (audis desidiaie votum?) edendum autem ex pluribus causis, maxime quod libelli quos emisimus dicuntur in manibus esse, quamvis iam gratiam novitatis exuerint; nisi tamen auribus nostris bibliopolae blandiuntur. sed sane blandiantur, dum per hoc mendacium nobis studia nostra commendent. vale.

III.

C. PLINIUS CANINIO RUFO SUO S.

To Caninius, who is at Comum, urging him to seek immortality by literary work.

Quid agit Comum, tuae meaeque deliciae? quid 1 suburbanum amoenissimum? quid illa porticus verna semper? quid platanon opacissimus? quid Euripus viridis et gemmeus? quid subiectus et serviens lacus?
 quid illa mollis et tamen solida gestatio? quid balineum illud, quod plurimus sol implet et circumit?
 quid triclinia illa popularia, illa paucorum? quid cubicula diurna nocturna? possident te et per vices 2 partiuntur? an, ut solebas, intentione rei familiaris obeundae crebris excursionibus avocaris? si te possident, felix beatusque es; si minus, unus ex multis. quin tu (tempus est enim) humiles et 3 sordidas curas aliis mandas et ipse te in alto isto pinguique secessu studiis adseris? hoc sit negotium tuum, hoc otium, hic labor, haec quies: in his vigilia, in his etiam somnus reponatur. effinge aliquid et 4 excude quod sit perpetuo tuum. nam reliqua rerum tuarum post te alium atque alium dominum sortientur, hoc numquam tuum desinet esse, si semel coeperit.
 scio quem animum, quod hortor ingenium. tu modo 5 enitere ut tibi ipse sis tanti quanti videberis aliis si tibi fueris. vale.

C. PLINIUS POMPEIAE CELERINAE SOCRUI S.

Pliny has been visiting his mother-in-law's villas, speaks highly of the treatment he received there, and invites her to visit him.

1 Quantum copiarum in Ocriculano, in Narniensi, in Carsulano, in Perusino tuo ! in Narniensi vero etiam balineum. ex epistulis meis (nam iam tuis opus non 2 est) una illa brevis et vetus sufficit. non mehercule tam mea sunt quae mea sunt quam quae tua : hoc tamen differunt, quod sollicitius et intentius tui me 3 quam mei excipiunt. idem fortasse eveniet tibi, si quando in nostra deverteris. quod velim facias, primum ut perinde nostris rebus ac nos tuis perfruaris, deinde ut mei expergiscantur aliquando, qui 4 me secure ac prope neglegenter expectant. nam mitium dominorum apud servos ipsa consuetudine metus exolescit ; novitatibus excitantur probarique dominis per alios magis quam per ipsos laborant.

C. PLINIUS VOCONIO ROMANO SUO S.

About the well-known delator M. Regulus, omnium bipedum nequissimus.

1 Vidistine quemquam M. Regulo timidiores humiliorem post Domitiani mortem ? sub quo non minora flagitia commiserat quam sub Nerone, sed tectiora. coepit vereri ne sibi irascerer; nec fallebatur, iraseebar. Rustici Aruleni periculum foverat, exultaverat morte, adeo ut librum recitaret publicaretque, in quo Rusticum insectatur atque etiam Stoicorum simiam appellat; adicit Vitelliana cicatrice stigmosum. agnoscis eloquentiam Reguli. lacerat Herennium Senecionem, tam intemperanter quidem ut dixerit ei Metius Carus 'quid tibi cum meis mortuis? numquid ego Crasso aut Camerino molestus sum?' quos ille sub Nerone accusaverat. haec me Regulus dolenter tulisse credebat, ideoque etiam cum recitaret librum, non adhibuerat. praeterea reminiscebatur quam capitaliter ipsum me apud centumviros lacesisset. aderam Arrionillae, Timonis uxori, rogatu Aruleni Rustici; Regulus contra. nitebamur nos in parte causae sententia Meti Modesti, optimi viri: is tunc in exilio erat, a Domitiano relegatus. ecce tibi Regulus 'quaero' inquit, 'Secunde, quid de Modesto sentias.' vides quod periculum, si respondissem 'bene,' quod flagitium, si 'male.' non possum dicere aliud tunc mihi quam deos adfuisse. 'respondebo' inquam 'si de hoc centumviri iudicaturi sunt.' rursus ille 'quaero quid de Modesto sentias.' iterum ego 'solebant testes in reos, non in damnatos interrogari.' tertio ille 'non iam quid de Modesto, sed quid de pietate Modesti sentias.' 'quaeris' inquam 'quid sentiam: at ego ne interrogare quidem fas puto de quo pronuntiatum est.' conticuit: me laus et gratulatio secuta est, quod nec famam meam aliquo responso, utili fortasse, inhonesto tamen, laeseram nec me laqueis tam insidiosae interrogationis in-8 volveram. nunc ergo conscientia exterritus adpre-bendit Caecilium Celerem, mox Fabium Iustum, rogat ut me sibi reconcilient. nec contentus, per-venit ad Spurinnam: huic suppliciter, ut est cum timet abiectissimus, 'rogo mane videas Plinium domi, sed plane mane (neque enim diutius ferre sollicitudinem possum), et quoquo modo efficias 9 ne mihi irascatur.' evigilaveram: nuntius a Spu-rinna: 'venio ad te.' 'immo ego ad te.' coimus in porticum Liviae, cum alter ad alterum tenderemus. exponit Reguli mandata, addit preces suas, ut 10 decebat optimum virum pro dissimillimo, parce. cui ego 'dispicies ipse quid renuntiandum Regulo putes:

 te decipi a me non oportet. expecto Mauricum' (nondum ab exilio venerat): 'ideo nihil alterutram in partem respondere tibi possum, facturus quidquid ille decreverit; illum enim esse huius consilii ducem, 11 me comitem decet.' paucos post dies ipse me Regulus convenit in praetoris officio: illuc persecutus secretum petit: ait timere se ne animo meo penitus haereret quod in centumvirali iudicio aliquando dixisset, cum responderet mihi et Satrio Rufo, 'Satrius Rufus, cui non est cum Cicerone aemulatio, 12 et qui contentus est eloquentia saeculi nostri.' re-

C. PLINIUS CORNELIO TACITO SUO S.

Pliny tells Tacitus his double feat of hunting and studying at the same time. Minerva, he says, wanders on the mountains, as well as Diana.

1 Ridebis, et licet rideas. ego ille quem nosti a pros-tres et quidem pulcherrimos cepi. ipse? inquis.
 ipse; non tamen ut omnino ab inertia mea et quiete discederem. ad retia sedebam: erat in proximo non venabulum aut lancea, sed stilus et pugillares:
 meditabar aliquid enotabamque, ut, si manus vacuas, 2 plenas tamen ceras reportarem. non est quod con-temnas hoc studendi genus. mirum est ut animus agitatione motuque corporis excitetur. iam undique silvae et solitudo ipsumque illud silentium quod venationi datur magna cogitationis incitamenta sunt.
 3 proinde cum venabere, licebit auctore me ut pan-arium et lagunculam sic etiam pugillares feras.
 experieris non Dianam magis montibus quam Minervam inerrare. vale.

C. PLINIUS OCTAVIO RUFO SUO S.

Pliny writes to Octavius, telling him he cannot comply with his request to appear for Gallus against the Baetici, whose patron he was, but promising to remain neutral.

Vide in quo me fastigio collocaris, cum mihi idem 1 potestatis idemque regni dederis quod Homerus Iovi optimo maximo, τῷ δ' ἕτερον μὲν ἔδωκε πατήρ, ἕτερον δ' ἀνένευσεν.

nam ego quoque simili nutu ac renutu respondere 2 voto tuo possum. etenim sicut fas est mihi, praesertim te exigente, excusare Baeticis contra unum homi-nem advocationem, ita nec fidei nostrae nec constan-tiae quam diligis convenit adesse contra provinciam quam tot officiis, tot laboribus, tot etiam periculis meis aliquando devinxerim. tenebo ergo hoc tem- 3 peramentum, ut ex duobus quorum alterutrum petis eligam id potius in quo non solum studio tuo verum etiam iudicio satisfaciam. neque enim tanto opere mihi considerandum est quid vir optimus in praesentia velis, quam quid semper sis probaturus. me 4 circa idus Octobris spero Romae futurum eademque haec praesentem quoque tua meaque fide Gallo confirmaturum; cui tamen iam nunc licet spondeas de animo meo ἧ καὶ κτανέησιν ἐπ' ὀφρύσι νεῦσε. cur 5 enim non usquequaque Homericis versibus agam tecum? quatenus tu me tuis agere non pateris, quorum tanta cupiditate ardeo ut videar mihi hac sola mercede posse corrumpi ut vel contra Baeticos 6 adsim. paene praeterii quod minime praetereundum fuit, accepisse me careotas optimas, quae nunc cum ficis et boletis certandum habent. vale.

C. PLINIUS POMPEIO SATURNINO SUO S.

Pliny asks Saturninus to revise a speech of his delivered at Comum at the opening of a public library, Pliny's free gift to his native town.

1 Peropportune mihi redditae sunt litterae tuae, quibus flagitabas ut tibi aliquid ex scriptis meis mitterem, cum ego id ipsum destinassem. addidisti ergo calcaria sponte currenti, pariterque et tibi
 2 veniam recusandi laboris et mihi exigendi verecundiam sustulisti. nam nec me timide uti decet eo quod oblatum est nec te gravari quod depoposcisti. non est tamen quod ab homine desidioso aliquid novi operis expectes. petiturus sum enim ut rursus vaces sermoni quem apud municipes meos habui 3 bibliothecam dedicaturus. memini quidem te iam quaedam adnotasse, sed generaliter: ideo nunc rogo ut non tantum universitati eius attendas, verum etiam particulas qua soles lima persequaris. erit enim et post emendationem liberum nobis vel publicare vel continere. quin immo fortasse hanc ipsam 4 cunctationem nostram in alterutram sententiam emendationis ratio deducet, quae aut indignum editione, dum saepius retractat, inveniet, aut dignum, dum id ipsum experitur, efficiet. quamquam huius 5 cunctationis meae causae non tam in scriptis quam in ipso materiae genere consistunt. est enim paulo quasi gloriosius et elatius. onerabit hoc modestiam nostram, etiamsi stilus ipse pressus demissusque fuerit, propterea quod cogimur cum de munificentia parentum nostrorum tum de nostra disputare. an- 6 ceps hic et lubricus locus est, etiam cum illi necessitas lenocinatur. etenim si alienae quoque laudes parum aequis auribus accipi solent, quam difficile est optinere ne molesta videatur oratio de se aut de suis disserentis? nam cum ipsi honestati tum aliquanto magis gloriae eius praedicationique invidemus atque ea demum recte facta minus detorquemus et carpimus quae in obscuritate et silentio reponuntur. qua ex 7 causa saepe ipse mecum, nobisne tantum, quidquid est istud, composuisse an et aliis debeamus? ut nobis, admonet illud, quod pleraque quae sunt agenda rei necessaria eadem peracta nec utilitatem parem nec gratiam retinent. ac ne longius exempla 8 repetamus, quid utilius fuit quam munificentiae rationem etiam stilo prosequi? per hoc enim adse-quebamur, primum ut honestis cogitationibus inmoraremur, deinde ut pulchritudinem illarum longiore tractatu pervideremus, postremo ut subitae largitionis comitem paenitentiam caveremus. nascebatur ex his exercitatio quaedam contemnendae pecuniae.

9 nam cum omnes homines ad custodiam eius natura restrinxerit, nos contra multum ac diu pensitatus amor liberalitatis communibus avaritiae vinculis eximebat, tantoque laudabilior munificentia nostra fore videbatur, quod ad illam non impetu quodam 10 sed consilio trahebamur. accedebat his cansis quod non ludos aut gladiatores sed annuos sumptus in alimenta ingenuorum pollicebamur. oculorum porro et aurium voluptates adeo non egent commendatione, ut non tam incitari debeant oratione quam reprimi: 11 ut vero aliquis libenter educationis taedium laborem-que suscipiat, non praemiis modo verum etiam 12 exquisitis adhortationibus inpetrandum est. nam si medici salubres, sed voluptate carentes cibos blandioribus adloquiis prosecuntur, quanto magis decuit publice consulentem utilissimum munus, sed non perinde popolare comitate orationis inducere? praesertim cum enitendum haberemus ut quod parentibus dabatur et orbis probaretur, honoremque paucorum 13 ceteri patienter et expectarent et mererentur. sed ut tunc communibus magis commodis quam privatae iactantiae studebamus, cum intentionem effectumque muneris nostri vellemus intellegi, ita nunc in ratione edendi veremur ne forte non aliorum utilitatibus sed 14 propriae laudi servisse videamur. praeterea meminimus quanto maiore animo honestatis fructus in conscientia quam in fama reponatur. sequi enim gloria, non adpeti debet, nec si casu aliquo non sequatur, idcirco quod gloriam meruit minus pulchrum est. ii vero qui benefacta sua verbis ador- 15 nant non ideo praedicare quia fecerint, sed ut praedicarent fecisse creduntur. sic, quod magnificum referente alio fuisset, ipso qui gesserat recensente vanescit. homines enim, cum rem destruere non possunt, iactationem eius incessunt. ita, si silenda feceris, factum ipsum, si laudanda non sileas, ipse culparis. me vero peculiaris quaedam inpedit 16 ratio. etenim hunc ipsum sermonem non apud populum sed apud decuriones habui, nec in propatulo sed in curia. vereor ergo ut sit satis congruens, cum 17 in dicendo adsentationem vulgi adclamationemque defugerim, nunc eadem illa editione sectari, cumque plebem ipsam cui consulebatur limine curiae parietibusque discreverim, ne quam in speciem ambitionis inciderem, nunc eos etiam ad quos ex munere nostro nihil pertinet praeter exemplum velut obvia ostentatione conquirere. habes cunctationis meae causas; 18 obsequar tamen consilio tuo, cuius mihi auctoritas pro ratione sufficiet. vale.

VIII.

C. PLINIUS MINUTIO FUNDANO SUO S.

In praise of the retirement of a country life.

1 Mirum est quam singulis diebus in urbe ratio aut constet aut constare videatur, pluribus cunctaque non 2 constet. nam si quem interrogas 'hodie quid egisti?' respondeat 'officio togae virilis interfui, sponsalia aut nuptias frequentavi, ille me ad signandum testamentum, ille in advocationem, ille in con-3 silium rogavit.' haec quo die feceris necessaria, eadem, si cotidie fecisse te reputes, inania videntur, multo magis cum secesseris. tunc enim subit recor-datio 'quot dies quam frigidis rebus absumpsi!' 4 quod evenit mihi, postquam in Laurentino meo aut lego aliquid aut scribo aut etiam corpori vaco, cuius 5 fulturis animus sustinetur. nihil audio quod audisse, nihil dico quod dixisse paeniteat: nemo apud me quemquam sinistris sermonibus carpit, neminem ipse reprehendo, nisi tamen me, cum parum commode scribo; nulla spe, nullo timore sollicitor, nullis rumoribus inquietor: mecum tantum et cum libellis 6 loquor. o rectam sinceramque vitam, o dulce otium honestumque ac paene omni negotio pulchrius! o mare, o litus, verum secretumque μουσείον, quam 7 multa invenitis, quam multa dictatis! proinde tu quoque strepitum istum inanemque discursum et fortuita et inania putentur, illi tamen plurimum tristitia, multum severitatis: reverearis occursum, non reformides. vitae sanctitas summa, comitas par: insectatur vitia, non homines, nec castigat errantes sed emendat. sequaris monentem attentus et pendens et persuaderi tibi, etiam cum persuaserit, gentissime instituit. socer Pompeius Iulianus, cum ipse provinciae princeps, inter altissimas conditiones, frui non licet? an ut magis angar quod non licet?

 nam dstringor officio ut maximo sic molestissimo.
 sedeo pro tribunali, subnoto libellos, conficio tabulas, non numquam (nam id ipsum quando contingit!) de his occupationibus apud Euphraten queri. ille me consolatur, adfirmat etiam esse hanc philosophiae et quidem pulcherrimam partem, agere negotium publicum, cognoscere, iudicare, promere et exercere iusti-11 tiam, quaeque ipsi doceant in usu habere. mihi tamen hoc unum non persuadet, satius esse ista facere quam cum illo dies totos audiendo discendoque consumere. quo magis te, cui vacat, hortor, cum in urbem proxime veneris (venias autem ob hoc maturius), illi te expoliendum limandumque permittas. neque enim ego, ut multi, invideo aliis bono quo ipse careo, sed contra sensum quendam voluptatemque percipio, si ea quae mihi denegantur amicis video superesse. vale.

XI.

C. PLINIUS FABIO IUSTO SUO S.

Pliny twits Fabius with being a bad correspondent.

Olim mihi nullas epistulas mittis. nihil est, inquis, quod scribam. at hoc ipsum scribe nihil esse quod scribas, vel solum illud unde incipere priores solebant 'si vales, bene est; ego valeo.' hoc mihi sufficit; est enim maximum. Indere me putas? serio peto. fac sciam quid agas, quod sine sollicitudine summa nescire non possum. vale.

C. PLINIUS CALESTRIO TIRONI SUO S.

Pliny laments the death of Corellius Rufus, who voluntarily starved himself.

Iacturam gravissimam feci, si iactura dicenda est tanti viri amissio. decessit Corellius Rufus, et quidem sponte, quod dolorem meum exulcerat. est enim luctuosissimum genus mortis quae non ex natura nec fatalis videtur. nam utcumque in illis qui morbo finiuntur magnum ex ipsa necessitate solacium est, in iis vero quos arcessita mors aufert hic insanabilis dolor est, quod creduntur potuisse diu 3 vivere. Corellium quidem summa ratio, quae sapientibus pro necessitate est, ad hoc consilium compulit, quamquam plurimas vivendi causas habentem, opti-mam conscientiam, optimam famam, maximam auctoritatem, praeterea filiam uxorem nepotem sorores, 4 interque tot pignora veros amicos. sed tam longa, tam iniqua valetudine conflictabatur ut haec tanta pretia vivendi mortis rationibus vincerentur. tertio et tricensimo anno, ut ipsum audiebam, pedum dolore correptus est. patrius hic illi: nam plerum-que morbi quoque per successiones quasdam, ut alia, 5 traduntur. hunc abstinentia sanctitate, quoad viridis aetas, vicit et fregit; novissimae cum senec-tute ingravescentem viribus animi sustinebat, cum quidem incredibilis cruciatus et indignissima tor-6 menta pateretur. iam enim dolor non pedibus solis,

C. PLINIUS SOSIO SENECTIONI SUO S.

Pliny speaks of the rich crop of poets which the year has produced, but complains of the listlessness of those who attend their recitations.

1 Magnum proventum poetarum annus hic attulit.
 toto mense Aprili nullus fere dies quo non recitaret aliquis. iuvat me quod vigent studia, proferunt se ingenia hominum et ostentant, tametsi ad audiendum 2 pigre coitur. plerique in stationibus sedent tempusque audiendi fabulis conterunt ac subinde sibi nun-tiari iubent an iam recitator intraverit, an dixerit praefationem, an ex magna parte evolverit librum:
 tunc demum, ac tunc quoque lente cunctanterque veniunt; nec tamen permanent, sed ante finem recedunt, alii dissimulanter et furtim, alii simpliciter 3 et libere. at Hercule memoria parentum Claudium Caesarem ferunt, cum in palatio spatiaretur audisset-que clamorem, causam requisisse, cumque dictum esset recitare Nonianum, subitum recitanti inopin-4 atumque venisse. nunc otiosissimus quisque multo ante rogatus et identidem admonitus aut non venit aut, si venit, queritur se diem, quia non perdidit, 5 perdidisse. sed tanto magis laudandi probandique sunt quos a scribendi recitandique studio haec auditorum vel desidia vel superbia non retardat. equidem prope nemini defui. erant sane plerique amici: neque enim est fere quisquam qui studia, ut non simul et nos amet. his ex causis longius quam 6 destinaveram tempus in urbe consumpsi. possum iam repetere secessum et scribere aliquid quod non recitem, ne videar, quorum recitationibus adfui, non auditor fuisse sed creditor. nam ut in ceteris rebus ita in audiendi officio perit gratia, si repositur. vale. /

C. PLINIUS IUNIO MAURICO SUO S.

Pliny recommends Minicius Acilianus to Junius Mauricus as a husband for his niece.

Petis ut fratris tui filiae prospiciam maritum; quod 1 merito mihi potissimum iniungis. scis enim quanto opere summum illum virum suspexerim dilexerimque, quibus ille adulescentiam meam exhortationibus fove- rit, quibus etiam laudibus ut laudandus viderer effecerit. nihil est quod a te mandari mihi aut 2 maius aut gratius, nihil quod honestius a me suscipi possit quam ut eligam iuvenem ex quo nasci nepotes Aruleno Rustico deceat. qui quidem diu quaerendus 3 fuisset, nisi paratus et quasi provisus esset Minicius Acilianus, qui me ut iuvenis iuvenem (est enim minor pauculis annis) familiarissime diligit, reveretur ut senem. nam ita formari a me et institui cupit ut

C. PLINIUS ERUCIO SUO S.

In praise of the style and literary work of Pompeius Saturninus.

1 Amabam Pompeium Saturninum, hunc dico nostrum, laudabamque eius ingenium, etiam antequam scirem quam varium, quam flexibile, quam multiplex esset: nunc vero totum me tenet, habet, possidet.

2 audivi causas agentem acriter et ardentem nec minus polite et ornate, sive meditata sive subita proferret. adsunt acutae crebraeque sententiae, gravis et decora constructio, sonantia verba et antiqua. omnia haec mire placent, cum impetu quodam et flumine perventur, placent, si retractentur. senties quod ego, cum orationes eius in manus sumpseris, quas facile cuilibet veterum, quorum est aemulus, comparabis.

4 idem tamen in historia magis satisfaciet vel brevitate vel luce vel suavitate vel splendore etiam et sublimitate narrandi. nam in contionibus idem qui in orationibus est, pressior tamen et circumscriptior

levibusque duriusculos quosdam, et hoc quasi Catullus aut Calvus. legit mihi nuper epistulas; uxoris 6 esse dicebat: Plautum vel Terentium metro solutum legi credidi. quae sive uxoris sunt, ut adfirmat, sive ipsius, ut negat, pari gloria dignus qui aut illa componat aut uxorem, quam virginem accepit, tam doctam politamque reddiderit. est ergo mecum per 7 diem totum: eundem antequam scribam, eundem cum scripsi, eundem etiam cum remittor, non tamquam eundem lego. quod te quoque ut facias et hortor et moneo. neque enim debet operibus eius 8 obesse quod vivit. an si inter eos quos numquam vidimus floruisse, non solum libros eius verum etiam imagines requireremus; eiusdem nunc honor praesentis et gratia quasi satietate languescit? at hoc 9 pravum malignumque est, non admirari hominem admiratione dignissimum, quia videre, adloqui, audire, complecti, nec laudare tantum verum etiam amare contigit. vale.

C. PLINIUS CORNELIO TITIANO SUO S.

Titinius Capito had obtained leave of the Emperor to raise a statue to L. Silanus. Pliny writes in praise of this, and generally of Capito's reverence for illustrious men.

Est adhuc curae hominibus fides et officium, sunt 1 qui defunctorum quoque amicos agant. Titinius

Capito ab imperatore nostro impetravit ut sibi liceret 2 statuam L. Silani in foro ponere. pulchrum et magna laude dignum amicitia principis in hoc uti, quantumque gratia valeas aliorum honoribus ex periri. est omnino Capitoni in usu claros viros 3 colere. mirum est qua religione, quo studio imagines Brutorum, Cassiorum, Catonum domi, ubi potest, habeat. idem clarissimi cuiusque vitam egregiis 4 carminibus exornat. scias ipsum plurimis virtutibus abundare qui alienas sic amat. redditus est L.
 Silano debitus honor, cuius immortalitati Capito prospexit pariter et suae. neque enim magis decorum et insigne est statuam in foro populi Romani habere quam ponere. vale.

C. PLINIUS SUETONIO TRANQUILLO SUO S.

Suetonius, alarmed by a dream, asks Pliny to seek an adjournment of a case which the latter was conducting for him. Pliny replies, and his remarks on dreams are most interesting.

1 Scribis te perterritum somnio vereri ne quid adversi in actione patiaris, rogas ut dilationem petam et 2 pauculos dies, certe proximum, excusem. difficile est, sed experiar: καὶ γάρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διός ἐστιν.
 refert tamen eventura soleas an contraria somniare.
 mihi reputanti somnium meum istud quod times tu 3 egregiam actionem portendere videtur. suscepam causam Iuni Pastoris, cum mihi quiescenti visa est socrus mea advoluta genibus ne agerem obsecrare.

 et eram acturus adulescentulus adhuc, eram in quad-ruplici iudicio, eram contra potentissimos civitatis atque etiam Caesaris amicos; quae singula excutere mentem mihi post tam triste somnium poterant.
 egi tamen λογισάμενος illud

εἰς οἰωνὸς ἄριστος ἀμύνασθαι περὶ πάτρης.

nam mihi patria et si quid carius fides videbatur.
 prospere cessit, atque adeo illa actio mihi aures hominum, illa ianuam famae patefecit. proinde dis- 5 pice an tu quoque sub hoc exemplo somnium istud in bonum vertas, aut si tutius putas illud cautissimi cuiusque praeceptum ‘quod dubitas ne feceris,’ id ipsum rescribe. ego aliquam stropham inveniam 6 agamque causam tuam, ut ipsam agere tu, cum voles, possis. est enim sane alia ratio tua, alia mea fuit.
 nam iudicium centumvirale differri nullo modo, istud aegre quidem sed tamen potest. vale.

C. PLINIUS ROMATIO FIRMO SUO S.

Pliny offers Romatius Firmus, his townsman, enough money to enable him to qualify as a member of the ordo equester.

Municeps tu meus et condiscipulus et ab ineunte 1 aetate contubernalis, pater tuus et matri et avunculo meo, mihi etiam, quantum aetatis diversitas passa est, familiaris; magnae et graves causae cur suscipere 2 augere dignitatem tuam debeam. esse autem tibi centum milium censum satis indicat quod apud nos decurio es. igitur ut te non decurione solum verum etiam equite Romano perfruamur, offero tibi ad implendas equestres facultates trecenta milia nummum.

 3 te memorem huius muneris amicitiae nostrae diuturnitas spondet: ego ne illud quidem admoneo, quod admonere deberem, nisi scirem sponte facturum, ut dignitate a me data quam modestissime, ut a me 4 data, utare. nam sollicitius custodiendus est honor in quo etiam beneficium amici tuendum est. vale.

XX.

C. PLINIUS CORNELIO TACITO SUO S.

He asks the opinion of Tacitus as to whether the exuberant or the terse style of composition is preferable.

1 Frequens mihi disputatio est cum quodam docto homine et perito, cui nihil aeque in causis agendis ut
 2 brevis placet. quam ego custodiendam esse confiteor, si causa permittat: alioqui praevaricatio est transire dicenda, praevaricatio etiam cursim et breviter attingere quae sint inculcanda, infigenda, repetenda.
 3 nam plerisque longiore tractatu vis quaedam et pondus accedit, utque corpori ferrum, sic oratio animo non 4 ictu magis quam mora inprimitur. hic ille mecum auctoritatibus agit ac mihi ex Graecis orationes Lysiae ostentat, ex nostris Gracchorum Catonisque, quorum sane plurimae sunt circumcisae et breves: ego Lysiae Demosthenen, Aeschinen, Hyperiden, multosque praeterea, Gracchis et Catoni Pollionem, Caesarem, Caelium, in primis M. Tullium oppono, cuius oratio optima fertur esse quae maxima. et hercule ut aliae bonae res ita bonus liber melior est quisque quo maior. vides ut statuas, signa, picturas, hominum denique 5 multorumque animalium formas, arborum etiam, si modo sint decorae, nihil magis quam amplitudo commendet. idem orationibus evenit, quin etiam voluminibus ipsis auctoritatem quandam et pulchritudinem adicit magnitudo. haec ille multaque alia quae a 6 me in eandem sententiam solent dici, ut est in disputando inconprehensibilis et lubricus, ita eludit ut contendat hos ipsos quorum orationibus nitar pauciora dixisse quam ediderint. ego contra puto. testes 7 sunt multae multorum orationes et Ciceronis pro Murena, pro Vareno, in quibus brevis et nuda quasi subscriptio quorundam criminum solis titulis indicatur. ex his apparet illum permulta dixisse, cum ederet, omisisse. idem pro Cluentio ait se totam causam 8 veteri instituto solum perorasse, et pro C. Cornelio quadriduo egisse; ne dubitare possimus quae per plures dies, ut necesse erat, latius dixerit postea recisa ac repurgata in unum librum, grandem quidem, unum tamen, coartasse. at aliud est actio bona, 9 aliud oratio. scio non nullis ita videri, sed ego, forsitan fallar, persuasum habeo posse fieri ut sit actio bona quae non sit bona oratio, non posse non bonam actionem esse quae sit bona oratio. est enim 10 oratio actionis exemplar et quasi ἀρχέτυπον. ideo in optima quaque mille figuras extemporales invenimus, in iis etiam quas tantum editas scimus, ut in Verrem, ‘artificem quem? quemnam? recte admones: Polyclitum esse dicebant.’ sequitur ergo ut actio sit absolutissima quae maxime orationis similitudinem expresserit, si modo iustum et debitam tempus accipiat; quod si negetur, nulla oratoris, maxima

11 iudicis culpa est. adsunt huic opinioni meae leges, quae longissima tempora largiuntur nec brevitatem dicentibus sed copiam, hoc est diligentiam suadent; quam praestare nisi in angustissimis causis non potest
12 brevitatis. adiciam quod me docuit usus, magister egregius. frequenter egi, frequenter iudicavi, frequenter in consilio fui: aliud alios movet, ac plerumque parvae res maximas trahunt. varia sunt hominum iudicia, variae voluntates: inde qui eandem causam simul audierunt, saepe diversum, interdum 13 idem, sed ex diversis animi motibus sentiunt. praeterea suae quisque inventioni favet et quasi fortissimum amplectitur, cum ab alio dictum est quod ipse praevidit. omnibus ergo dandum est aliquid quod teneant, 14 quod agnoscant. dixit aliquando mihi Regulus, cum simul adessemus, ‘tu omnia quae sunt in causa putas

C. PLINIUS PLINIO PATERNO SUO S.

Pliny gives his opinion of some slaves whom Paternus had purchased for him.

Ut animi tui iudicio sic oculorum plurimum tribuo; non quia multum, ne tibi placeas, sed quia tantum quantum ego sapis: quamquam hoc quoque multum est. omissis iocis credo decentes esse servos qui sunt empti mihi ex consilio tuo: superest ut frugi sint, quod de venalibus melius auribus quam oculis iudicatur. vale.

XXII.

C. PLINIUS CATILIO SEVERO SUO S.

In praise of T. Aristo, whose illness he laments.

Diu iam in urbe haereo, et quidem attonitus. perturbat me longa et pertinax valetudo Titi Aristonis, quem singulariter et miror et diligo. nihil est enim illo gravius, sanctius, doctius, ut mihi non unus homo sed litterae ipsae omnesque bonae artes in uno homine summum periculum adire videantur. quam peritus 2 ille et privati iuris et publici! quantum rerum quantum exemplorum, quantum antiquitatis tenet! nihil est quod discere velis, quod ille docere non possit: mihi certe, quotiens aliquid abditum quaero, ille 3 thesaurus est. iam quanta sermonibus eius fides, quanta auctoritas, quam pressa et decora cunctatio! quid est quod non statim sciat? et tamen plerumque haesitat, dubitat diversitate rationum, quas acri magnoque iudicio ab origine causisque primis repetit,

4 discernit, expendit. ad hoc quam parcus in victu, quam modicus in cultu! soleo ipsum cubiculum eius ipsumque lectum ut imaginem quandam priscae frugalitatis aspicere. ornat haec magnitudo animi, quae nihil ad ostentationem, omnia ad conscientiam refert recteque facti non ex populi sermone mercedem sed
5 ex facto petit. in summa non facile quemquam existis qui sapientiae studium habitu corporis praeferunt huic viro comparabis. non quidem gymnasia sectatur aut porticus nec disputationibus longis aliorum otium suumque delectat, sed in toga negotiisque versatur,
6 multos advocatione, plures consilio iuvat. nemini tamen istorum castitate, pietate, iustitia, fortitudine etiam primo loco cesserit. mirareris, si interesses, qua patientia hanc ipsam valetudinem toleret, ut dolori resistat, ut sitim differat, ut incredibilem febrium
7 ardorem inmotus opertusque transmittat. nuper me paucosque mecum quos maxime diligit advocavit rogavitque ut medicos consuleremus de summa valetudinis, ut, si esset insuperabilis, sponte exiret e vita, si tantum difficilis et longa, resisteret maneretque: dandum 9 enim precibus uxoris, dandum filiae lacrimis, dandum etiam nobis amicis ne spes nostras, si modo non essent inanes, voluntaria morte deseret. id ego arduum in 10 primis et praecipua laude dignum puto. nam impetu quodam et instinctu procurrere ad mortem commune cum multis, deliberare vero et causas eius expendere, utque suaserit ratio, vitae mortisque consilium vel suscipere vel ponere ingentis est animi. et medici 11 quidem secunda nobis pollicentur: superest ut promissis deus adnuat tandemque me hac sollicitudine exsolvat; qua liberatus Laurentinum meum, hoc est libellos et pugillares studiosumque otium repetam. nunc enim nihil legere, nihil scribere aut adsidenti vacat aut anxio libet. habes quid timeam, quid 12 optem, quid etiam in posterum destinem: tu quid egeris, quid agas, quid velis agere, invicem nobis, sed laetioribus epistulis scribe. erit confusioni meae non mediocre solacium, si tu nihil quereris. vale.

C. PLINIUS POMPEIO FALCONI SUO S.

Pliny's opinion as to whether a tribune of the plebs should appear as an advocate.

Consulis an existimem te in tribunatu causas agere 1 debere. plurimum refert quid esse tribunatum putes, inanem umbram et sine honore nomen an potestatem sacrosanctam et quam in ordinem cogi ut a nullo ita 2 ne a se quidem deceat. ipse cum tribunus essem, erraverim fortasse qui me aliquid putavi, sed tamquam essem, abstinui causis agendis: primum, quod deforme arbitrabar, cui adsurgere, cui loco cedere omnis oporteret, hunc omnibus sedentibus stare; et qui iuhere posset tacere quemcumque, huic silentium clepsydra indici; et quem interfari nefas esset, hunc etiam convicia audire, et si inulta pateretur, inertem, 3 si ulcisceretur, insolentem videri. erat hic quoque aestus ante oculos, si forte me appellasset vel ille cui adessem vel ille quem contra, intercederem et auxilium ferrem, an quiescerem sileremque et quasi eiurato 4 magistratu privatum ipse me facerem. his rationibus motus, malui me tribunum omnibus exhibere quam 5 paucis advocatum. sed tu, iterum dicam, plurimum interest quid esse tribunatum putes, quam personam tibi inponas, quae sapienti viro ita aptanda est ut perferatur. vale.

XXIII.

C. PLINIUS BAEBIO HISPANO SUO S.

Pliny tells Hispanus that Tranquillus wishes to buy a farm which a friend of Hispanus wishes to sell, and asks the latter to see that he gets it at a reasonable price.

1 Tranquillus, contubernalis meus, vult emere agel-lum quem venditare amicus tuus dicitur. rogo cures quanti aequum est emat: ita enim delectabit emisse.

nam mala emptio semper ingrata, eo maxime, quod exprobare stultitiam domino videtur. in hoc autem 3 agello, si modo adriserit pretium, Tranquilli mei stomachum multa sollicitant, vicinitas urbis, oppor-tunitas viae, mediocritas villae, modus ruris, qui avocet magis quam dstringat. scholasticis porro 4 dominis, ut hic est, sufficit abunde tantum soli ut relevare caput, reficere oculos, reptare per limitem unamque semitam terere omnisque viteculas suas nosse et numerare arbusculas possint. haec tibi 5 exposui, quo magis scires quantum esset ille mihi, ego tibi debiturus, si praediolum istud, quod com-mendatur his dotibus, tam salubriter emerit ut paenitentiae locum non relinquat. vale.

C. PLINIUS ROMANO SUO S.

In praise of Verginius Rufus who has just died.

Post aliquot annos insigne atque etiam memorabile 1 populi Romani oculis spectaculum exhibuit publicum funus Vergini Rufi, maximi et clarissimi civis, perinde felicis. triginta annis gloriae suae supervixit. legit 2 scripta de se carmina, legit historias et posteritati suae interfuit. perfunctus est tertio consulatu, ut summum fastigium privati hominis inpleret, cum 3 principis noluisset. Caesares quibus suspectus atque etiam invisus virtutibus fuerat evasit, reliquit incolu-mem optimum atque amicissimum, tamquam ad hunc 4 ipsum honorem publici funeris reservatus. annum tertium et octogensimum excessit in altissima tran-quillitate, pari veneratione. usus est firma valetudine, nisi quod solebant ei manus tremere, citra dolorem tamen. aditus tantum mortis durior longiorque, sed 5 hic ipse laudabilis. nam cum vocem praepararet acturus in consulatu principi gratias, liber quem forte acceperat grandiore et seni et stanti ipso pondere elapsus est. hunc dum sequitur colligitque, per leve et lubricum pavimentum fallente vestigio cecidit cox-amque fregit, quae parum apte collocata reluctante 6 aetate male coënt. huius viri exequiae magnum ornamentum principi, magnum saeculo, magnum etiam foro et rostris attulerunt. laudatus est a consule Cornelio Tacito: nam hic supremus felicitati eius 7 cumulus accessit, laudator eloquentissimus. et ille quidem plenus annis abiit, plenus honoribus, illis etiam quos recusavit: nobis tamen quaerendus ac desiderandus est ut exemplar aevi prioris, mihi vero praecipue, qui illum non solum publice quantum

C. PLINIUS PAULINO SUO S.

Pliny remonstrates with Paulinus for not writing.

1 Irascor, nec liquet mihi an debeam, sed irascor.
 scis quam sit amor iniquus interdum, inpotens saepe, μικραίτιος semper. haec tamen causa magna est, nescio an iusta: sed ego, tamquam non minus iusta quam magna sit, graviter irascor quod a te tam diu 2 litterae nullae. exorare me potes uno modo, si nunc saltem plurimas et longissimas miseris. haec mihi sola excusatio vera, ceterae falsae videbuntur. non sum auditurus 'non eram Romae' vel 'occupatio 3 eram.' illud enim nec di sinant, ut 'infirmior.' ipse ad villam partim studiis partim desidia fruor, quorum utrumque ex otio nascitur. vale.

C. PLINIUS NEPOTI SUO S.

An account of the rhetorician Isaeus.

1 Magna Isaeum fama praecesserat, maior inventus
 est. summa est facultas, copia, ubertas: dicit semper ex tempore, sed tamquam diu scripserit. sermo Graecus, immo Atticus; praefationes tersae, graciles, 2 dulces, graves interdum et erectae. poscit controversias plures, electionem auditoribus permittit, saepe etiam partes, surgit, amicitur, incipit; statim omnia

ac paene pariter ad manum, sensus reconditi occurrant, verba, sed qualia! quaesita et exculta. multa lectio in subitis, multa scriptio elucet. prooemiatur apte, ³ narrat aperte, pugnat acriter, colligit fortiter, ornat excelse, postremo docet, delectat, adficit; quid maxime, dubites; crebra ἐνθυμήματα, crebri syllogismi, circumscripti et effecti, quod stilo quoque adsequi magnum est: incredibilis memoria; repetit altius quae dixit ex tempore, ne verbo quidem labitur. ad tantam ⁴ ἐξιν studio et exercitatione pervenit: nam diebus et noctibus nihil aliud agit, nihil audit, nihil loquitur. annum sexagesimum excessit et adhuc scholasticus ⁵ tantum est; quo genere hominum nihil aut sincerius aut simplicius aut melius. nos enim qui in foro verisque litibus terimur multum malitiae, quamvis nolimus, addiscimus. schola et auditorium et ficta ⁶ causa, res inermis innoxia est, nec minus felix, senibus praesertim. nam quid in senectute felicius quam quod dulcissimum est in iuventa? quare ego Isaeum ⁷ non disertissimum tantum verum etiam beatissimum iudico, quem tu nisi cognoscere concupiscis, saxeus ferreusque es. proinde si non ob alia nosque ipsos, ⁸ at certe ut hunc audias, veni. numquamne legisti Gaditanum quendam Titi Livi nomine gloriaque commotum ad visendum eum ab ultimo terrarum orbe venisse statimque ut viderat abisse? ἀφιλόκαλον, inlitteratum, iners, ac paene etiam turpe est non putare tanti cognitionem, qua nulla est iucundior,

9 nulla pulchrior, nulla denique humanior. dices ‘habeo hic quos legam non minus desertos.’ etiam:
 sed legendi semper occasio est, audiendi non semper.
 praeterea multo magis, ut vulgo dicitur, viva vox adficit. nam licet acriora sint quae legas, altius tamen in animo sedent quae pronuntiatio, vultus, 10 habitus, gestus etiam dicentis adfigit; nisi vero falsum putamus illud Aeschinis, qui cum legisset Rhodiis orationem Demosthenis admirantibus cunctis, adiecisse fertur τί δὲ, εἰ αὐτοῦ τοῦ θηρίου ἠκούσατε; et erat Aeschines, si Demostheni credimus, λαμπροφωνότατος.
 fatebatur tamen longe melius eadem illa pronuntiasse 11 ipsum qui pepererat. quae omnia huc tendunt ut audias Isaeum, vel ideo tantum ut audieris. vale.

C. PLINIUS CALVINAE SUAE S.

Calvina had apparently hesitated about entering on her father's inheritance, because it was incumbered by debt. Pliny writes, explaining that he had bought up all the debts and thus become sole creditor, and ends by telling her she need not fear to enter on the inheritance, as he will cause her father's debt to him to be written off.

1 Si pluribus pater tuus vel uni cuilibet alii quam mihi debuisset, fuisset fortasse dubitandum an adires 2 hereditatem etiam viro gravem. cum vero ego ductus adfinitatis officio dimissis omnibus qui, non dico molestiores, sed diligentiores erant creditor solus exstiterim, cumque ego nubenti tibi in dotem centum milia contulerim praeter eam summam quam pater tuns quasi de meo dixit (erat enim solvenda de meo), magnum habes facilitatis meae pignus, cuius fiducia debes famam defuncti pudoremque suscipere; ad quod ne te verbis magis quam rebus horter, quidquid mihi pater tuus debuit, acceptum tibi fieri iubebo. nec 3 est quod verearis ne sit mihi onerosa ista donatio.

 sunt quidem omnino nobis modicae facultates, dignitas sumptuosa, reditus propter conditionem agellorum nescio minor an incertior: sed quod cessat ex reditu frugalitate suppletur, ex qua velut fonte liberalitas nostra decurrit; quae tamen ita temperanda est ne 4 nimia profusione inarescat, sed temperanda in aliis, in te vero facile ratio constabit, etiamsi modum excesserit. vale.

C. PLINIUS LUPERCO SUO S.

Pliny sends to Luperus for revision part of a speech on behalf of his native town.

Actionem et a te frequenter efflagitatem et a me 1 saepe promissam exhibui tibi, nondum tamen totam:
 adhuc enim pars eius perpolitur. interim quae 2 absolutiora mihi videbantur non fuit alienum iudicio tuo tradi. his tu rogo intentionem scribentis accom-modes. nihil enim adhuc inter manus habui cui maiorem sollicitudinem praestare deberem. nam in 3 ceteris actionibus existimationi hominum diligentia tantum et fides nostra, in hac etiam pietas subicietur. inde et liber crevit, dum ornare patriam et amplificare gaudemus, pariter et defensionis eius servimus et 4 gloriae. tu tamen haec ipsa, quantum ratio exegerit, reseca. quotiens enim ad fastidium legentium deliciasque respicio, intellego nobis commendationem et

5 ex ipsa mediocritate libri petendam. idem tamen qui a te hanc austeritatem exigo cogor id quod diversum est postulare, ut in plerisque frontem remittas. sunt enim quaedam adulescentium auribus danda, praesertim si materia non refragetur: nam descriptiones locorum, quae in hoc libro frequentiores erunt, non historice tantum sed prope poetice prosequi
6 fas est. quod tamen si quis extiterit qui putet nos laetius fecisse quam orationis severitas exigat, huius, ut ita dixerim, tristitiam reliquae partes actionis exorare debebunt. adnisi certe sumus ut quamlibet diversa genera lectorum per plures dicendi species
7 teneremus, ac sicut veremur ne quibusdam pars aliqua secundum suam cuiusque naturam non probetur, ita videmur posse confidere ut universitatem omnibus
8 varietas ipsa commendet. nam et in ratione conviviorum, quamvis a plerisque cibus singuli tempereamus, totam tamen cenam laudare omnes solemus, nec ea quae stomachus noster recusat adimunt gratiam
9 illis quibus capitur. atque haec ego sic accipi volo, non tamquam adsecutum me esse credam, sed tamquam adsequi laboraverim: fortasse non frustra; si

modo tu curam tuam admoveris interim istis, mox iis quae secuntur. dices te non posse satis diligenter id facere, nisi prius totam actionem cognoveris. fateor: in praesentia tamen et ista tibi familiariora fient et quaedam ex his talia erunt ut per partes emendari possint. etenim si avolsum statuae caput aut membrum aliquod 11 inspiceres, non tu quidem ex illo posses congruentiam aequalitatemque deprendere, posses tamen iudicare an id ipsum satis elegans esset. nec alia ex causa prin- 12 cipia librorum circumferuntur, quam quia existimatur pars aliqua etiam sine ceteris esse perfecta. longius 13 me provexit dulcedo quaedam tecum loquendi: sed iam finem faciam, ne modum, quem etiam orationi adhibendum puto, in epistula excedam. vale.

C. PLINIUS AVITO SUO S.

An account of a shabby genteel host.

Longum est altius repetere, nec refert quemadmo- 1 dum acciderit ut homo minime familiaris cenarem apud quendam, ut sibi videbatur, lautum et diligentem, ut mihi, sordidum simul et sumptuosum. nam sibi 2 et paucis opima quaedam, ceteris vilia et minuta ponebat. vinum etiam parvulis lagunculis in tria genera descripserat, non ut potestas eligendi, sed ne ius esset recusandi, aliud sibi et nobis, aliud minoribus amicis (nam gradatim amicos habet), aliud suis nos-3 trisque libertis. animadvertit qui mihi proximus recumbebat et an probarem interrogavit. negavi.

'tu ergo' inquit 'quam consuetudinem sequeris?'
'eadem omnibus pono: ad cenam enim, non ad notam invito cunctisque rebus exaequo quos mensa 4 et toro aequavi.' 'etiamne libertos?' 'etiam: convictores enim tunc, non libertos puto.' et ille 'magno tibi constat?' 'minime.' 'qui fieri potest?' 'quia scilicet liberti mei non idem quod ego bibunt, sed 5 idem ego quod liberti.' et hercule si gulae temperes, non est onerosum quo utaris ipse communicare cum pluribus. illa ergo reprimenda, illa quasi in ordinem redigenda est, si sumptibus parcas, quibus aliquanto rectius tua continentia quam aliena contumelia con-6 sulas. quorsus haec? ne tibi, optimae indolis iuveni, quorundam in mensa luxuria specie frugalitatis in-ponat. convenit autem amori in te meo, quotiens tale aliquid inciderit, sub exemplo praemonere quid 7 debeas fugere. igitur memento nihil magis esse vitandum quam istam luxuriae et sordium novam societatem; quae cum sint turpissima discreta ac separata, turpins iunguntur. vale.

defuncti memoriae, dolori patris, verum etiam exemplo prospectum est. acuent ad bonas artes iuventutem adulescentibus quoque, digni sint modo, tanta praemia constituta, acuent principes viros ad liberos suscipiendos et gaudia ex superstitibus et ex

C. PLINIUS CANINIO SUO S.

Pliny longs for the retirement and delights of Comum.

1 Studes an piscaris an venaris an simul omnia? possunt enim omnia simul fieri ad Larium nostrum. nam lacus piscem, feras silvae quibus lacus cingitur, studia altissimus iste secessus adfatim suggerunt.
2 sed sive omnia simul sive aliquid facis, non possum dicere 'invideo': angor tamen non et mihi licere quae sic concupisco ut aegri vinum balinea fontes. numquamne hos artissimos laqueos, si solvere negatur,

C. PLINIUS APOLLINARI SUO S.

Pliny asks Apollinaris to advance the candidature of Sextus Erucius.

Anxium me et inquietum habet petitio Sexti Eruci mei. adficio cura et quam pro me sollicitudinem non adii quasi pro me altero patior; et alioqui meus pudor, mea existimatio, mea dignitas in discrimen adducitur. ego Sexto latum clavum a Caesare nostro, ego quaesturam inpetravi, meo suffragio pervenit ad ius tribunatum petendi, quem nisi obtinet in senatu, vereor ne decepisse Caesarem videar. proinde adnitendum est mihi ut talem eum indicent omnes, qualem esse princeps mihi credidit. quae causa si studium meum non incitaret, adiutum tamen cuperem iuvenem probissimum, gravissimum, eruditissimum, omni denique laude dignissimum, et quidem cum tota domo. nam pater ei Erucius Clarus, vir sanctus, antiquus, disertus, atque in agendis causis exercitatus, quas summa fide, pari constantia, nec verecundia minore defendit. habet avunculum C. Septicium, quo nihil verius, nihil simplicius, nihil candidius, nihil fidelius omnibus nunc ego in uno referre gratiam possum.

 itaque preno amicos, supplico, ambio, domos statio-nesque circumeo, quantumque vel auctoritate vel gratia 6 valeam precibus experior. te quoque obsecro ut aliquam oneris mei partem suscipere tanti putes.

 diligeris, coleris, frequentaris: ostende modo velle te, nec deerunt qui quod tu velis cupiant. vale.

C. PLINIUS OCTAVIO SUO S.

He urges Octavius to publish, or at least recite his poems.

1 Hominem te patientem vel potius durum ac paene crudelem, qui tam insignes libros tam diu teneas!
 2 quousque et tibi et nobis invidebis, tibi maxima laude, nobis voluptate? sine per ora hominum vagentur. magna et iam longa expectatio est, quam quidam tui versus et invito te claustra sua refregerunt. hos nisi retrahis in corpus, quandoque ut 4 erroneos aliquem cuius dicantur invenient. habe ante oculos mortalitatem, a qua adserere te hoc uno moni-mento potes: nam cetera fragilia et caduca non minus quam ipsi homines occidunt desinuntque. dices, ut 5 soles, 'amici mei viderint.' opto equidem amicos tibi tam fideles, tam eruditos, tam laboriosos, ut tantum curae intentionisque suscipere et possint et velint, sed dispice ne sit parum providum sperare ex aliis quod tibi ipse non praestes. et de editione 6 quidem interim ut voles: recita saltem, quo magis libeat emittere, utque tandem percipias gaudium, quod ego olim pro te non temere praesumo. ima- 7 ginor enim qui concursus, quae admiratio te, qui clamor, quod etiam silentium maneat; quo ego, cum dico vel recito, non minus quam clamore delector, sit modo silentium acre et intentum et cupidum ulteriora audiendi. hoc fructu tanto, tam parato desine studia 8 tua infinita ista cunctatione fraudare; quae cum modum excedit, verendum est ne inertiae et desidiae vel etiam timiditatis nomen accipiat. vale.

C. PLINIUS ARRIANO SUO S.

An account of the famous prosecution of Marius Priscus, proconsul of Africa.

Solet esse gaudio tibi, si quid actum est in senatu 1 dignum ordine illo. quamvis enim quietis amore secesseris, insidet tamen animo tuo maiestatis publicae cura. accipe ergo quod per hos dies actum est, personae claritate famosum, severitate exempli salubre, rei magnitudine aeternum. Marius Priscus accusan- 2 tibus Afris, quibus pro consule praefuit, ommissa defen-sione iudices petiit. ego et Cornelius Tacitus, adesse provincialibus iussi, existimavimus fidei nostrae convenire notum senatui facere excessisse Priscum inmanitate et saevitia crimina quibus dari indices possent, cum ob innocentes condemnandos, interficiendos etiam, pecunias accepisset. respondit Fronto Catus deprecatusque est ne quid ultra repetundarum legem quaereretur, omniaque actionis suae vela, vir movendarum lacrimarum peritissimus, quodam velut vento miserationis inplevit. magna contentio, magni utrimque clamores, aliis cognitionem senatus lege conclusam aliis liberam solutamque dicentibus, quantumque admisisset reus tantum vindicandum. novissime consul designatus Iulius Ferox, vir rectus et sanctus, Mario quidem indices interim censuit dandos, evocandos autem quibus diceretur innocentium poenas vendidisse. quae sententia non praevaluit modo, sed omnino post tantas dissensiones fuit sola frequens, adnotatumque experimentis quod favor et misericordia acres et vehementes primos impetus habent, paulatim consilio et ratione quasi restincta considunt. unde evenit ut quod multi clamore permixto tuentur nemo tacentibus ceteris dicere velit: patescit enim, cum separaris a turba, contemplatio rerum quae turba teguntur. venerunt qui adesse erant iussi, Vitellius Honoratus et Flavius Marcianus: ex quibus Honoratus trecentis milibus exilium equitis Romani septemque amicorum eius ultimam poenam, Marcianus unius equitis Romani septingentis milibus plura supplicia arguebatur emisse:

 erat enim fustibus caesus, damnatus in metallum, strangulatus in carcere. sed Honoratum cognitioni 9 senatus mors opportuna subtraxit, Marcianus inductus est absente Prisco. itaque Tuccius Cerialis consularis iure senatorio postulavit ut Priscus certior fieret, sive quia miserabiliorem, sive quia invidiosiore fore arbitrabatur, si praesens fuisset, sive, quod maxime credo, quia aequissimum erat commune crimen ab utroque defendi, et si dilui non potuisset, in utroque puniri. dilata res est in proximum senatum, cuius ipse 10 conspectus augustissimus fuit. princeps praesidebat; erat enim consul: ad hoc Ianuarius mensis cum cetera tum praecipue senatorum frequentia celeberrimus:
 praeterea causae amplitudo auctaque dilatione expectatio et fama insitumque mortalibus studium magna et inusitata noscendi omnes undique exciverat.
 imaginare quae sollicitudo nobis, qui metus, quibus 11 super tanta re in illo coetu praesente Caesare dicendum erat. equidem in senatu non semel egi, quin immo nusquam audiri benignius soleo, tunc me tamen ut nova omnia novo metu permovebant. obversabatur 12 praeter illa quae supra dixi causae difficultas: stabat modo consularis, modo septemvir epulorum, iam neutrum. erat ergo perquam onerosum accusare 13 damnatum, quem ut premebat atrocitas criminis, ita quasi peractae damnationis miseratio tuebatur. ut- 14

cumque tamen animum cogitationemque collegi, coepi dicere non minore audientium adsensu quam sollici-tudine mea: dixi horis paene quinque. nam duodecim clepsydris quas spatiosissimas acceperam sunt additae quattuor. adeo illa ipsa quae dura et adversa 15 dicturo videbantur secunda dicenti fuerunt. Caesar quidem tantum mihi studium, tantam etiam curam (nimium est enim dicere sollicitudinem) praestitit, ut libertum meum post me stantem saepius admoneret voci laterique consulerem, cum me vehementius putaret intendi quam gracilitas mea perpeti posset.
 respondit mihi pro Marciano Claudius Marcellinus.
 16 missus deinde senatus et revocatus in posterum:
 neque enim iam inchoari poterat actio, nisi ut noctis 17 interventu scinderetur. postero die dixit pro Mario Salvius Liberalis, vir subtilis dispositus acer disertus; in illa vero causa omnes artes suas protulit. respondit Cornelius Tacitus eloquentissime et, quod 18 eximium orationi eius inest, σεμνῶς. dixit pro Mario rursus Fronto Catins insigniter, utque iam locus ille poscebat, plus in precibus temporis quam in defensione consumpsit. huins actionem vespera inclusit, non tamen sic ut abrumperet. itaque in tertium diem probationes exierunt. iam hoc ipsum pulchrum et antiquum, senatum nocte dirimi, triduo vocari, triduo 19 contineri. Cornutus Tertullus, consul designatus, vir egregius et pro veritate firmissimus, censuit septingenta milia quae acceperat Marius aerario inferenda, quingenta milia denariorum probabatur, ipse praeterea accepisse sestertia decem milia, foedissimo quidem titulo, nomine unguentarii, qui titulus a vita hominis compti semper et pumicati non abhorrebat. 24 placuit censente Cornuto referri de eo proximo senatu: tunc enim, casu an conscientia, afuerat. 25 habes res urbanas; invicem rusticas scribe: quid arbusculae tuae, quid vineae, quid segetes agunt, quid oves delicatissimae? in summa, nisi aequae longam epistulam reddis, non est quod postea nisi brevissimam expectes. vale.

C. PLINIUS ARRIANO SUO S.

A continuation of the preceding letter.

1 Λειτουργιον illud quod superesse Mari Prisci causae proxime scripseram, nescio an satis, circumcisum 2 tamen et adrasum est. Firminus inductus in senatum respondit crimini noto. secutae sunt diversae sententiae consulum designatorum: Cornutus Tertullus censuit ordine movendum, Acutius Nerva in sortitione provinciae rationem eius non habendam. quae sententia tamquam mitior vicit, cum sit alioqui durior 3 tristiorque. quid enim miserius quam exectum et exemptum honoribus senatoriis labore et molestia non carere? quid gravius quam tanta ignominia adfectum non in solitudine latere, sed in hac altissima specula conspiciendum se monstrandumque praebere ?

 praeterea quid publice minus aut congruens aut de- 4 corum, notatum a senatu in senatu sedere ipsisque illis a quibus sit notatus aequari et summotum a proconsulatu, quia se in legatione turpiter gesserat, de proconsulibus iudicare damnatumque sordium vel damnare alios vel absolvere ? sed hoc pluribus visum 5
 est. numerantur enim sententiae, non ponderantur ; nec aliud in publico consilio potest fieri, in quo nihil est tam inaequale quam aequalitas ipsa. nam cum sit impar prudentia, par omnium ius est. inplevi 6 promissum priorisque epistulae fidem exsolvi, quam ex spatio temporis iam recepisse te colligo : nam et festinanti et diligenti tabellario dedi ; nisi quid im-pedimenti in via passus est. tuae nunc partes ut 7

C. PLINIUS PRISCO SUO S.

To Neratius Priscus, asking him to advance the interests of Voconius Romanus.

Et tu occasiones obligandi me avidissime amplec- 1 teris, et ego nemini libentius debeo. duabus ergo de 2 causis a te potissimum petere constitui quod inpetra-tum maxime cupio. regis exercitum amplissimum :

 tempus quo amicos tuos exornare potuisti. conver- 3

tere ad nostros, nec hos multos. malles tu quidem multos, sed meae verecundiae sufficit unus aut alter, 4 ac potius unus. is erit Voconius Romanus. pater ei in equestri gradu clarus, clarior vitricus, immo pater alius: nam huic quoque nomini pietate successit. mater e primis citerioris Hispaniae: scis quod iudicium provin- 5 ciae illius, quanta sit gravitas. ipse flamen proxime fuit. hunc ego, cum simul studeremus, arte familiariterque dilexi: ille meus in urbe, ille in secessu con- 6 tubernalis, cum hoc seria, cum hoc iocos miscui. quid enim illo aut fidelius amico aut sodale iucundius? mira in sermone, mira etiam in ore ipso vultuque 7 suavitas. ad hoc ingenium excelsum, subtile, dulce, facile, eruditum in causis agendis: epistulas quidem 8 scribit, ut Musas ipsas Latine loqui credas. amatur a me plurimum nec tamen vincitur. equidem iuvenis statim iuveni quantum potni per aetatem avidissime contuli et nuper ab optimo principe trium liberorum ius impetravi. quod quamquam parce et cum delectu 9 daret, mihi tamen, tamquam eligeret, indulisit. haec beneficia mea tueri nullo modo melius quam ut augeam possum, praesertim cum ipse illa tam grate interpre- tetur ut, dum priora accipit, posteriora mereatur. 10 habes qualis, quam probatus carusque sit nobis, quem rogo pro ingenio, pro fortuna tua exornes. in primis ama hominem: nam licet tribuas ei quantum amplis- simum potes, nihil tamen amplius potes amicitia tua; cuius esse eum usque ad intimam familiaritatem capacem quo magis seires, breviter tibi studia, mores, omnem denique vitam eius expressi. extenderem 11 preces, nisi et tu rogari diu nolles, et ego tota hoc epistula fecissem : rogat enim, et quidem efficacissime, qui reddit causas rogandi. vale.

C. PLINIUS MAXIMO SUO S.

Pliny laments the degeneracy of the Centumviral Court.

Verum opinaris : dstringor centumviralibus cansis, 1 quae me exercent magis quam delectant. sunt enim pleraeque parvae et exiles : raro incidit vel personarum claritate vel negotii magnitudine insignis. ad hoc 2 pauci cum quibus iuuet dicere : ceteri audaces atque etiam magna ex parte adulescentuli obscuro ad declamandum huc transierunt, tam irreverenter et temere ut mihi Atilius noster expresse dixisse videatur sic in foro pueros a centumviralibus causis auspicari ut ab Homero in scholis. nam hic quoque ut illic primum coepit esse quod maximum est. at hercule 3 ante memoriam meam (ita maiores natu solent dicere) ne nobilissimis quidem adulescentibus locus erat nisi aliquo consulari producente : tanta veneratione pulcherrimum opus colebatur. nunc refractis pudoris 4 et reverentiae claustris omnia patent omnibus, nec inducuntur sed inrumpunt. sequuntur auditores actoribus similes, conducti et redempti : manceps convenitur : in media basilica tam palam sportulae quam in triclinio dantur: ex iudicio in iudicium pari mer-5 cede transitur. inde iam non inurbane σοφοκλεῖς vocantur [ἀπὸ τοῦ σοφῶς καὶ καλεῖσθαι]: isdem Latinum 6 nomen inpositum est laudiceni. et tamen crescit in dies foeditas utraque lingua notata. here duo nomen-clatores mei (habent sane aetatem eorum qui nuper togas sumpserint) ternis denariis ad laudandum tra-7 hebantur. tanti constat ut sis disertissimus. hoc pretio quamlibet numerosa subsellia implentur, hoc ingens corona colligitur, hoc infiniti clamores commoventur, cum mesochorus dedit signum: opus est enim signo apud non intellegentes, ne audientes 8 quidem; nam plerique non audiunt, nec ulli magis laudant. si quando transibis per basilicam et voles scire quo modo quisque dicat, nihil est quod tribunal ascendas, nihil quod praebeas aurem; facilis divinatio:

 scito eum pessime dicere qui laudabitur maxime.
 9 primus hunc audiendi morem induxit Largius Licinus, 10 hactenus tamen ut auditores corrogaret: ita certe ex Quintiliano, praeceptore meo, audisse memini. narrabat ille ‘adsectabar Domitium Afrum: cum apud centumviros diceret graviter et lente (hoc enim illi actionis genus erat), audit ex proximo inmodicum insolitumque clamorem. admiratus reticuit. ubi 11 silentium factum est, repetiit quod abruperat. iterum clamor, iterum reticuit, et post silentium coepit idem tertio. novissime quis diceret quaesivit: responsum est ‘Licinus.’ tum intermissa causa ‘centumviri’ inquit, 'hoc artificium periit.' quod alioqui perire 12 incipiebat, cum perisse Afro videretur, nunc vero prope funditus extinctum et eversum est. pudet referre quae quam fracta pronuntiatione dicantur, quibus quam teneris clamoribus excipiantur. plausus 13 tantum ac potius sola cymbala et tympana illis canticis desunt: ululatus quidem (neque enim alio vocabulo potest exprimi theatri quoque indecora laudatio) large supersunt. nos tamen adhuc et utilitas ami- 14 corum et ratio aetatis moratur ac retinet: veremur enim ne forte non has indignitates reliquisse sed laborem fugisse videamur. sumus tamen solito rariores, quod initium est gradatim desinendi. vale.

C. PLINIUS VALERIANO SUO S.

He asks Valerianus how he likes his old Marsian estate, and also some property which he has recently purchased.

Quo modo te veteres Marsi tui? quo modo emptio 1 nova? placent agri, postquam tui facti sunt? rarum id quidem: nihil enim aequè gratum est adeptis quam concupiscentibus. me praedia materna parum com- 2 mode tractant, delectant tamen ut materna, et alioqui longa patientia occallui. habent hunc finem adsiduae querellae quod queri pudet. vale.

XVI.

C. PLINIUS ANNIANO SUO S.

Annianus has told Pliny that the codicilli of Acilianus are illegal, and advises him to take advantage of the flaw. Pliny refuses, saying that he prefers to observe the spirit of the will, disregarding legal quibbles.

1 Tu quidem pro cetera tua diligentia admones me codicillos Aciliani, qui me ex parte instituit heredem, pro non scriptis habendos, quia non sint confirmati 2 testamento; quod ius ne mihi quidem ignotum est, cum sit his etiam notum qui nihil aliud sciunt. sed ego propriam quandam legem mihi dixi, ut defunc-torum voluntates, etiamsi iure deficerentur, quasi perfectas tuerer. constat autem codicillos istos 3 Aciliani manu scriptos. licet ergo non sint confirmati testamento, a me tamen ut confirmati observa-4 buntur, praesertim cum delatori locus non sit. nam si verendum esset ne quod ego dedissem populus eriperet, cunctantior fortasse et cautior esse deberem:
 cum vero liceat heredi donare quod in hereditate subsedit, nihil est quod obstet illi meae legi, cui publicae leges non repugnant. vale.

C. PLINIUS GALLO SUO S.

A description of Pliny's Laurentinian Villa.

1 Miraris cur me Laurentinum vel, si ita mavis, minus, quod altera fenestra admittit orientem, occidentem altera retinet, hac et subiacens mare longius 7 quidem sed securius intuetur. huius cubiculi et triclinii illius obiectu includitur angulus, qui purissimum solem continet et accendit. hoc hibernaculum, hoc etiam gymnasium meorum est: ibi omnes silent venti exceptis qui nubilum inducunt et serenum ante 8 quam usum loci eripiunt. adnectitur angulo cubi-culum in hapsida curvatum, quod ambitum solis fenestris omnibus sequitur. parieti eius in bibliothecae speciem armarium insertum est, quod non 9 legendos libros sed lectitandos capit. adhaeret dormitorium membrum transitu interiacente, qui suspensus et tubulatus conceptum vaporem salubri temperamento huc illuc digerit et ministrat. reliqua pars lateris huius servorum libertorumque usibus detinetur, plerisque tam mundis ut accipere hospites 10 possint. ex alio latere cubiculum est politissimum; deinde vel cubiculum grande vel modica cenatio, quae plurimo sole, plurimo mari lucet; post hanc cubiculum cum procoetone, altitudine aestivum, munimentis hibernum: est enim subductum omnibus ventis.

 huic cubiculo aliud et procoeton communi pariete 11 iunguntur. inde balinei cella frigidaria spatiosa et effusa, cuius in contrariis parietibus duo baptisteria velut eiecta sinuantur, abunde capacia, si mare in proximo cogites. adiacet unctorium, hypocauston, adiacet propnigeon balinei, mox duae cellae magis elegantes quam sumptuosae: cohaeret calida piscina 12 mirifica, ex qua natantes mare aspiciunt, nec procul sphaeristerium, quod calidissimo soli inclinato iam die occurrit. hic turris erigitur, sub qua diaetae duae, totidem in ipsa, praeterea cenatio, quae latissimum mare, longissimum litus, villas amoenissimas prospicit.

 est et alia turris: in hac cubiculum, in quo sol 13 nascitur conditurque: lata post apotheca et horreum:
 sub hoc triclinium, quod turbati maris non nisi fra-gorem et sonum patitur, eumque iam languidum et desinentem; hortum et gestationem videt, qua hortus includitur. gestatio buxo aut rore marino, ubi deficit 14 buxus, ambitur: nam buxus, qua parte defenditur tectis, abunde viret; aperto caelo apertoque vento et quamquam longinqua aspergine maris inarescit. adiacet gestationi interiore circumitu vinea tenera et 15 umbrosa nudisque etiam pedibus mollis et cedens.
 hortum morus et ficus frequens vestit, quarum arborum illa vel maxime ferax terra est, malignior ceteris. hac non deteriore quam maris facie cenatio remota a mari fruitur: cingitur diaetis duabus a tergo, quarum fenestris subiacet vestibulum villae et hortus alius pinguis et rusticus. hinc cryptoporticus prope 16 publici operis extenditur. utrimque fenestrae, a mari plures, ab horto singulae, sed alternis pauciores. hae, cum serenus dies et inmotus, omnes, cum hinc vel inde ventus inquietus, qua venti quiescunt, sine iniuria patent. ante cryptoporticum xystus violis odoratus: 17

teporem solis infusi repercussu cryptoporticus auget, quae ut tenet solem sic aquilonem inhibet summo-vetque, quantumque caloris ante tantum retro frigoris.
 similiter africanum sistit, atque ita diversissimos ventos alium alio latere frangit et finit. haec iucunditas 18 eius bieme, maior aestate. nam ante meridiem xystum, post meridiem gestationis hortique proximam partem umbra sua temperat, quae, ut dies crevit decrevitve, modo brevior modo longior hac vel illa cadit.
 19 ipsa vero cryptoporticus tum maxime caret sole, cum ardentissimus culmini eius insistit. ad hoc patentibus fenestris favonios accipit transmittitque nec umquam 20 aëre pigro et manente ingravescit. in capite xysti deinceps [cryptoporticus horti] diaeta est, amores mei ;
 re vera amores : ipse posui. in hac heliocaminus quidem alia xystum alia mare utraque solem, cubi-culum autem valvis cryptoporticum, fenestra prospicit 21 mare. contra parietem medium zotheca perquam eleganter recedit, quae specularibus et velis obductis reductisve modo adicitur cubiculo modo aufertur. lectum et duas cathedras capit : a pedibus mare, a tergo villae, a capite silvae : tot facies locorum totidem 22 fenestris et distinguit et miscet. iunctum est cubi-culum noctis et somni. non illud voces servulorum, non maris murmur, non tempestatum motus, non fulgurum lumen ac ne diem quidem sentit, nisi fenestris apertis. tam alti abditique secreti illa ratio, quod interiacens andron parietem cubiculi hortique tamen et squillas optimas egerit. villa vero nostra etiam mediterraneas copias praestat, lac in primis: nam illuc e pascuis pecora conveniunt, si quando 29 aquam umbramve sectantur. iustisne de causis iam tibi videor incolere, inhabitare, diligere secessum, quem tu nimis urbanus es nisi concupiscis? atque utinam concupiscas! ut tot tantisque dotibus villulae nostrae maxima commendatio ex tuo contubernio accedat. vale.

C. PLINIUS MAURICO SUO S.

Pliny promises Mauricus to find a good teacher for the sons of Arulenus Rusticus, his brother.

1 Quid a te mihi iucundius potuit iniungi, quam ut praeceptorem fratris tui liberis quaererem? nam beneficio tuo in scholam redeo et illam dulcissimam aetatem quasi resumo: sedeo inter iuvenes, ut solebam, atque etiam experior quantum apud illos auctoritatis
 2 ex studiis habeam. nam proxime frequenti auditorio inter se coram multis ordinis nostri clare loquebantur: intravi, conticuerunt; quod non referrem, nisi ad illorum magis laudem quam ad meam pertineret, ac nisi sperare te vellem posse fratris tui filios probe
 3 discere. quod superest, cum omnes qui profitentur audiero, quid de quoque sentiam scribam efficiamque, quantum tamen epistula consequi poterò, ut ipse
 4 omnes audisse videaris. debeo enim tibi, debeo memoriae fratris tui hanc fidem, hoc studium, praesertim super tanta re. nam quid magis interest vestra quam ut liberi (dicerem tui, nisi nunc illos magis amares) digni illo patre, te patruo reperiantur? quam curam mihi, etiam si non mandasses, vindicasset. nec ignoro suscipiendas offensas in eligendo ⁵ praeceptore, sed oportet me non modo offensas verum etiam simultates pro fratris tui filiis tam aequo animo subire quam parentes pro suis. vale.

C. PLINIUS CERIALI SUO S.

Pliny has been asked by Cerialis to recite one of his speeches to some friends. He gives his reasons for hesitating to do so.

Hortaris ut orationem amicis pluribus recitem. ¹ faciam, quia hortaris, quamvis vehementer addubitem. neque enim me praeterit actiones quae ² recitantur impetum omnem caloremque ac prope nomen suum perdere, ut quas soleant commendare simul et accendere iudicium consessus, celebritas advocatorum, expectatio eventus, fama non unius actoris, diductumque in partes audientium studium, ad hoc dicentis gestus, incessus, discursus etiam, omnibusque motibus animi consentaneus vigor corporis. unde accidit ut ii qui sedentes agunt, quamvis ³ illis maxima ex parte supersint eadem illa quae stantibus, tamen hoc quod sedent quasi debilitentur

4 et deprimantur. recitantium vero praecipua pronuntiationis adiumenta, oculi manus, praepediuntur; quo minus mirum est, si auditorum intentio relanguescit, nullis extrinsecus aut blandimentis capta aut
5 aculeis excitata. accedit his quod oratio de qua loquor pugnax et contentiosa est. porro ita natura comparatum est ut ea quae scripsimus cum labore
6 etiam cum labore andiri putemus. et sane quotus quisque tam rectus auditor, quem non potius dulcia haec et sonantia quam austera et pressa delectent? est quidem omnino turpis ista discordia, est tamen quia plerumque evenit, ut aliud auditores aliud indices exigant, cum alioqui his praecipue auditor adfici debeat quibus idem, si foret iudex, maxime
7 permoveretur. potest tamen fieri ut quamquam in his difficultatibus libro isti novitas lenocinetur, novitas apud nostros; apud Graecos enim est quiddam quam-
8 vis ex diverso non tamen omnino dissimile. nam ut illis erat moris leges quas ut contrarias prioribus legibus arguebant aliarum collatione convincere, ita nobis inesse repetundarum legi quod postularem cum hac ipsa lege tum aliis colligendum fuit; quod nequaquam blandum auribus imperitorum tanto maiorem apud doctos habere gratiam debet, quanto
9 minorem apud indoctos habet. nos autem, si placuerit recitare, adhibituri sumus eruditissimum quemque. sed plane adhuc an sit recitandum examina tecum, omnisque quos ego movi in utraque

6 peierasset. facit hoc Regulus non minus scelerate quam frequenter, quod iram deorum, quos ipse cotidie 7 fallit, in caput infelicis pueri detestatur. Velleius Blaesus, ille locuples consularis, novissima valetudine conflictabatur: cupiebat mutare testamentum. Regulus, qui speraret aliquid ex novis tabulis, quia nuper captare eum coeperat, medicos hortari, rogare 8 quoquo modo spiritum homini prorogarent. postquam signatum est testamentum, mutat personam, vertit adlocutionem, isdemque medicis ‘quousque miserum cruciatis? quid invidetis bona morte cui dare vitam non potestis?’ moritur Blaesus, et tamquam omnia audisset, Regulo ne tantulum quidem.
9 sufficiunt duae fabulae, an scholastica lege tertiam 10 poscis? est unde fiat. Aurelia, ornata femina, sig-natura testamentum sumpserat pulcherrimas tunicas.
Regulus cum venisset ad signandum, ‘rôgo’ inquit 11 ‘has mihi leges.’ Aurelia ludere hominem putabat, ille serio instabat: ne multa, coëgit mulierem aperire tabulas ac sibi tunicas quas erat induta legare: observavit scribentem, inspexit an scripsisset. et Aurelia quidem vivit, ille tamen istud tamquam morituram coëgit. et hic hereditates, hic legata, 12 quasi mereatur, accipit. ἀλλὰ τί διατείνομαι in ea civitate, in qua iam pridem non minora praemia, immo maiora, nequitia et improbitas quam pudor et 13 virtus habent? aspice Regulum, qui ex paupere et tenui ad tantas opes per flagitia processit ut ipse mihi dixerit, cum consuleret quam cito sestertium sescenties inpleturus esset, invenisse se exta duplicia, quibus portendi milies et ducenties habiturum. et 14 habebit, si modo, ut coepit, aliena testamenta, quod est inprobissimum genus falsi, ipsis quorum sunt illa dictaverit. vale.

NOTES.

I.

To C. Septicius Clarus are addressed also i. 15, vii. 28, viii. 1. Pliny's high opinion of him, ii. 9, 4. He was brother of Erucius Clarus, uncle of Sextus Erucius. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 425.

1. non servato etc. See Introduction.

2. neglectae iacent, stronger than neglectae sunt. Cf. Cic. ad Fam. v. 7, 2, sed hoc scito, tuos veteres hostes, novos amicos, vehementer litteris percussos atque ex magna spe deturbatos iacere; Ovid, Trist. v. 7, 48, victaque pugnaci iura sub ense iacent.

supprimam, = "keep back." So of keeping back money, Cic. pro Cluent. xxxvi. 99, iis idc quae ille reticuit atque suppressit. For the simple verb cf. Hor. Art. Poet. 388, nonumque prematur in annum.

II.

Arrianus Maturus was a Roman knight and a native of Altinum in Venetia. Other letters to him, ii. 11. 12; iv. 8; vi. 2; viii. 21. In iii. 2. Pliny speaks in high terms of him, and says huius ego consilio in negotiis, iudicio in studiis utor.

1. librum = "speech." Pliny uses the word in the same sense ii. 5, 3. 19, 7; iii. 13, 1. 18, 4. Catanaeus says this is the speech for Attia Viriola referred to in vi. 33. This is mere conjecture.

sermo in circulis dumtaxat et in convivis est liberior quam fuit: iv. 3. (sub fin.), nos animo dumtaxat vigemus; v. 10. (ad fin.), valde me Athenae delectarunt, urbs dumtaxat et urbis ornamentum.

figuris orationis, “rhetorical turns” (σχήματα). Cic. Opt. Gen. Orat. § 14. sententiis et earum formis tamquam figuris—the mould of a sentence.

vim, “the fire.” Cic. de Orat. iii. 7. suavitatem Isocrates, sonitum Aeschines, vim Demosthenes habuit; Quintil. x. 1, 108. nam mihi videtur M. Tullius effinxisse vim Demosthenis, copiam Platonis, iucunditatem Isocratis.

pauci quos. Verg. Aen. vi. 129,

pauci quos aequus amavit Iuppiter aut ardens evexit ad aethera virtus, dis geniti potuere.

“To equal the fire of those great orators is given only to a few, the favourites of heaven.”

3. inprobe, “too arrogantly.” Cf. vii. 30, 5. libellos meos orationi Demosthenis Κατὰ Μειδίου confers, quam habui in manibus, non ut aemularer (inprobum enim ac paene furiosum). The original meaning of inprobus is “excessive.” Cf. labor inprobus, Verg. Geor. i, 145; inprobus anser (greedy), ibid. 119 (Conington’s note).

longae desidiae indormientem etc., “roused me from my long sleep of idleness.” Cf. Cic. Philip. ii. 12, an faces admovendae sunt, quae te excitent tantae causae indormientem? Seneca de vit. beat. 10, desidiam dissolutionemque segnis animi sibi indormientis.

4. Marci nostri = “My friend Marcus.” Catanaeus would translate “my countryman,” as opposed to Demosthenes.

ληκύθους: cf. Cic. ad Att. i. 14. totum hunc locum, quem ego varie meis orationibus soleo pingere, de flamma, de ferro—nosti illas ληκύθους—valde graviter pertexuit. λήκυθος has been identified with the Latin ampulla. Cf. Hor. Ar. Poet. 97. proiicit ampullas et sesquipedalia verba. Similarly the verb ληκυθίζειν = ampullari. Cf. Hor. Epis. i. 3, 14. an tragica desaevit et ampullatur in arte? It means a jar in which painters’ pigments were kept. Hence it came to be used for high rhetorical colouring or polish. Cf. Cic. Orat. iii.

25, claris coloribus picta oratio; Cic. ad Att. ii. 1, 2, (Isocrati) discipulorum arculas ac non nihil etiam Aristotelia pigmenta—‘paint boxes and rouge.’ Hence λήκυθοι and ampullae might come to be used as=“bombast.” Some wrongly derive the meaning “swelling expressions” from the shape of the ampulla, defined by Forcellini as vasis genus turgidum veluti inflato ventre, etc.

quotiens paulum etc. Gierig thus points out the mixture of metaphors in this sentence, viator qui locorum amoenitates sequens de itinere decedit, non adhibet ampullas. Corte, offended at the mixture, would read (partly following MS. Medic.), non tamen omnino Marci nostri ληκύθους fugimus: ut etiam (just as) paulum de itinere, cedendo non intempestivis amoenitatibus, submovemur.

amoenitatibus, “a pleasant topic.” Amoenus and amoenitas properly refer to natural scenery.

5. acres, “lively.” tristes, “severe.” exceptione, “reservation.” veniam, “indulgence.”

quo magis intendam limam, “to make your critical file all the sharper.” Gierig’s explanation of the phrase as= intendam animum quo fortius utatur lima is far-fetched and unnecessary. For instances of intendere in P., cf. ii. 11, 15. 20, 3; iii. 10, 6. intendere animum; iv. 9, 17. mitigare leges et intendere; iv. 17, 11. a quo nova lis intenditur (who prosecutes a novel suit); v. 3, 8. acrius scriptis suis intendit; v. 12, 1. ut sollicitudine intendar (stimulated); vii. 9, 13. ut his opusculis animus intendatur (exerted); vii. 17, 7. tanto diligentius quanto sollicitius intendo (my application increases with my anxiety); vii. 27, 7. ad scribendum animum, oculos, manum intendit; vii. 27, 15. eruditionem tuam intendas; viii. 9, 21. intende libro (apply yourself). Of lima as applied to criticism cf. Hor. Ar. Poet. 291. limae labor; Ovid, Epp. ex Ponto i. (6.) 5, 19.

scilicet incipiam lima mordacius uti, et sub iudicium singula verba vocem;

also Pliny i. 8, 3. lima persequaris; v. 10, (11.) 3. perfectum opus absolutumque est, nec iam splendescit lima sed atteritur.

fortasse: construe with errori, “what is perhaps my folly.”

album calculum etc.=“give your favourable verdict”;

v. 11, 3. o diem laetum notandumque mihi candidissimo calculo; Ovid, Met. 15, 41.

mos erat antiquus niveis atrisque lapillis his damnare reos, illis absolvere culpa.

6. libelli quos emisimus, i.e. de ultione Helvidii (Catan.). Cf. iv. 21, 3; vii. 30, 4; ix. 13.

in manibus esse, "to be still in circulation." Horace, Epist. ii. 1, 53. Naevius in manibus non est et mentibus haeret? For the same phrase applied to the writer = "to be on hand," cf. Cic. de Senect. xi. 38, septimus mihi Originum liber est in manibus.

gratiam novitatis, "the charm of novelty."

III.

To Caninius Rufus of Comum are addressed letters ii. 8. iii. 7. vi. 21. vii. 18. viii. 4. ix. 33. He wrote Epic poetry, and from viii. 4. we learn that he was contemplating a poem on the Dacian war. (For the Dacian wars of Domitian and Trajan see Mommsen, Provinces of the Roman Empire, vol. i. p. 219, Merivale vii. 340.) From vii. 18 we find that he endowed a feast for his townsmen in imitation of Pliny's munificence.

1. suburbanum (praedium).

porticus verna semper "that cloister where it is always springtime." Probably because the porticus was sheltered from the extreme heat in summer and from the extreme cold in winter. Cf. v. 6, 31. porticus ante medium diem hiberna, inclinato die aestiva. Martial, i. Epi. 12—hic rudis aestivas praestabat porticus umbras.

Also Hor. Od. ii. 15, 14. But the porticus may also have been surrounded with evergreens and beds of rosae hibernae, and this may be another reason for its spring-like appearance.

platanon, "plane grove." platanus arboris genus quod umbrae tantum gratia expetitur (Forcellini). It is called caelebs in Hor. Od. ii. 15, 4. because it is not used for supporting vines. There are numerous allusions to the platanus in classical writers. See especially the account of it in Plin. Nat. Hist. xii. 1. Cf. Martial de platano Cordubensi, crevit et effuso laetior umbra mero. Cic. de Orat. i. 7, 28. tua and gravel, others of firm turf. Cf. ii. 17, 15. Notice the curious concrete use of the substantive in -tio, differing from such words as advocatio, optio, etc.

quod plurimus sol etc., “which the full sun floods with his light, as he travels round it” The bathroom had windows so placed as to catch the sun on all sides. Cf. ii. 17, 8. cubiculum in hapsida curvatum quod ambitum solis fenestris omnibus sequitur.

triclinia illa popularia = multorum, “those dining rooms for large and those for small parties.” Cf. the use of populus, v. 3, 11. haec ita disputo quasi populum in auditorium, non in cubiculum amicos advocarim.

cubicula etc. When cubiculum is used by itself by Pliny it means a salon or sitting room. When used of a bedroom it is accompanied by some epithet, as in ii. 17, 22. cubiculum noctis et somni. In Paneg. 51. cubiculum principis means the Emperor’s pavilion at the games. Cf. also Sueton. Nero, 12.

possident etc., “Do they hold you, and share you in turn?” Some take possidere = engross, captivate, comparing i. 16, 1. But the other sense is more natural. For the use of partiuntur, cf. Ovid, Met. iv. 774.

Phorcydas, unius sortitas luminis usum.

2. intentione, “attention to.” The metaphor in the word is from a bow. Cf. Cic. de Sen. xi. 37. intentum animum tamquam arcum habebat. intentio in this sense of mental strain or attention is used in Epp. ii. 5, 2. ii. 10, 5. ii. 19, 4. iii. 5, 17. iv. 5, 2. iv. 9, 11. ix. 13, 18. ix. 18, 1. ix. 26, 6. ix. 36, 3; also Quint. x. 3, 23. ab intentione operis destinati. In i. 8, 13 it means “intention.” In iv. 7, 3 it means “determination,” intentio quidquid velis optinendi.

excursionibus, “journeys from home.” Cf. iii. 4, 2. in Tuscos excucurrissem; 6, 6. excurrere isto; also x. 8, (24) 3. 120, (121) 2. and Cic. ad Att. x. 15. excurro in Pompeianum.

unus ex multis, “you are no happier than your neighbours.” Unus e multis or de multis or unus multorum, Gr. εἷς τῶν πολλῶν, means one of the common run of men. Cic. Brut. lxxix. 274. non fuit orator unus e multis; Cic. de Off. i. 30. 109. efficere ut unus de multis esse videatur; Horace, Sat. i. 9, 71. unus multorum. Roby § 1291.

3. humiles et sordidas curas, i.e. private business details. iii. 20, 11. habeant nostrae quoque litterae aliquid non humile nec sordidum nec privatis rebus inclusum.

alto isto pinguique secessu. pinguis, often applied to otium by P., is here applied to the place where one may enjoy otium, "in that deep and calm retreat of yours." ii. 1, 4. 8, 1. v. 6, 45. altius ibi otium et pinguius, eoque securius; vii. 26, 3. mollem et pinguem, hoc est, innoxiam beatamque vitam; ix. 3, 1. pingue illud altumque otium.

te studiis adseris, "devote yourself to study." An extension of the original meaning of adscrere. Cf. the phrase adserere in libertatem. We might paraphrase "Free yourself from cares and devote yourself to study." For adserere with a and ahlat., cf. ii. 10, 4.

in his vigilia etc., "In this let your waking and even your sleeping hours be spent." In classical Latinity the plural vigiliae would be used.

4. effinge aliquid et excude. "Mould and fashion something which will be yours for ever." effinge and excude are taken from statuary; the former refers to working in wax or clay, the latter to brass or marble. Cf. Ep. vii. 9, 11. nunc Venerem effingat; Verg. Aen. vi. 848, excudent alii spirantia mollius aera. Juvenal, vii. 55, uses the metaphor of coining in speaking of literary composition.

reliqua rerum tuarum. For this use of the neuter plural of the adjective with genitive of the noun, cf. iii. 19, 4. incerta fortunae; viii. 4. 2, montium abrupta; x. 37, (46) 2, plana civitatis et humilia; Pan. 7. prospera et laeta stationis istius; Ibid. 30. usurpata collium. The construction (a Greek one) is common in post-Augustan prose. So Tacitus, passim, e.g. obstantia silvarum (Ann. i. 50), laeva maris, subita belli, media campi.

alium atque alium etc. For a similar sentiment, cf. ii. 10, 4; also Hor. Odes ii. 14, 21.

5. tu modo etc. "Do you only strive to value yourself as highly as you will be valued in other men's eyes, once you put that value on yourself."

III.

Pompeia Celerina was the mother of Pliny's second wife (Döring wrongly says first). She was probably the second wife of Vettius Proculus, who is described in ix. 13, 13. as uxoris meae, quam amiseram, vitricus. She was evidently rich, and in iii. 19, 8. Pliny speaks of getting money from her, and using her purse as his own. Besides the estates mentioned in this letter, we learn from vi. 10, 1. that she had another at Alsium, on the coast of Etruria, which formerly belonged to Verginius Rufus. Cf. also i. 18, 3.

1. Ocriculano etc. Ocriculum and Narnia were in Umbria, Carsulum or Carseoli in the Aequian territory, and Perusia in Etruria.

nam iam tuis opus non est, i.e. because P. had now seen the estates for himself.

una illa brevis etc. : "That one short letter of old date is enough to tell all this."

2. non tam mea etc. : "My own possessions are not so much my own to me as yours are."

sollicitius et intentius etc. : "Your servants receive me with more care and attention than my own do."

3. me expectant : me emphatic = "who await my coming."

4. nam mitium dominorum etc. : "for when masters are easy-going mere habit effaces the awe which slaves have of them ;" i.e. "familiarity breeds contempt."

novitatibus, "by new faces." For this use of the plural of abstract nouns in a concrete sense, cf. i. 2, 4. amoenitates ; ii. 17, 20. diaeta, amores mei. For other instances, see Kraut, 4.

V.

For an account of [C. Licinius] Voconius Romanus see Ep. ii. 13. where he is recommended to Priscus. To him are written iii. 13, where Pliny sends him his Panegyric for revision, and also apparently ii. 1. vi. 15. vi. 33. viii. 8. ix. 7. ix. 28. In x. 4. (3). Pliny recommends him to Trajan for elevation to senatorial rank. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 430.

Crasso aut Camerino. M. Licinius Crassus, brother of Piso who was adopted by Galba, had been put to death by Nero. Regulus was his accuser: cf. Tacit. Hist. i. 48. iv. 42; Mommsen in Keil, p. 416.

Sulpicius Camerinus, who had been proconsul in Africa, was accused under Nero, but acquitted by the Emperor. Cf. Tac. Ann. xiii. 52. Apparently he was afterwards put to death.

4. haec, i.e. this abuse of Arulenus.

adhibuerat. For adhibere in the sense of inviting to a recitation, cf. ii. 19, 9; iv. 7, 2; vi. 15, 4. In the same sense are used adsumere vii. 17, 5. and advocare vii. 17, 12.

capitaliter, late Latin. Forcellini explains usque ad periculum capitis. Translate "What a mortal attack he had made on me in the Centumviral Court."

centumviros. The court of the Centumviri originally consisted of 105 members, three being elected from each of the 35 tribes. It appears to have dealt chiefly with wills and successions, and also to have tried criminal cases. For a list of causae centumvirales, cf. Cic. de Orat. i. 38. Subsequently the number of the Centumviri was raised to 180.

5. aderam, the usual word for an advocate appearing in defence of a case. We know nothing more of Arrionilla or Timon.

Regulus contra, i.e. contra Arrionillam alteri parti aderat (Gierig).

nitebamur. "We were relying, in a portion of our case, on a decision of Mettius Modestus." Modestus had probably been praetor in the time of Domitian. For more concerning him see Mommsen in Keil, p. 419.

ecce tibi, "behold you." tibi, ethical dative. For the phrase, cf. Cic. de Orat. ii. 22. ecce tibi exortus est Isocrates; de Off. iii. 21. ecce tibi, qui rex populi Romani esse concupierit; pro Cluent. xxviii. ecce tibi eiusmodi sortitio. (Fausset's note.)

periculum ... flagitium, i.e. dangerous if he spoke well of a man in exile; disgraceful if he spoke ill of a good man either through fear of Regulus or a desire to flatter Domitian.

non possum dicere, etc.: "I must say that it was nothing short of Providence that helped me at that moment."

de hoc, i.e. the case of Modestus.

6. solebant. Gesner and others note the use of the imperfect as containing a bitter censure of the present time. "Formerly (in better days) witnesses used to be," etc.

pietate, "loyalty" to the emperor. High treason against the Caesar (maiestas, laesa maiestas) is often spoken of as impietas. Cf. Paneg. 33. nemini impietas obiecta; Tacit. Ann. vi. 47. Albucilla defertur impietatis in Principem.

7. fas. To call in question the decision of the Emperor would have been nefas. utili, "to my own advantage."

8. adprehendit, "he lays hold on"; "in the same sense as prehendere, prensare (manum), of making a request.

Caecilius Celer, as his name shows, belonged to the same gens as Pliny. It is to him probably that vii. 17. is addressed. He may also be the Celer to whom Martial, vii. ep. 52, refers as having been governor of Celtiberia.

Fabium Iustum: to him are addressed i. 11 and vii. 2, and also Tacitus' Dialogue on Oratory.

Spurinnam: for particulars about Vestricius Spurinna, for whom Pliny had a high admiration, read ii. 7. iii. 1. To him are addressed iii. 10. v. 17.

sed plane mane, "yes, very early." Plane mane = bene mane (Cic. ad Att. iv. 9.). Gierig calls attention to the cacophony.

9. "immo ego ad te," "'nay,' I replied, 'I'll come to you.'" This would be only courteous on Pliny's part to a senior.

porticum Liviae: MSS. Med. and Vat. read porticu. Cf. v. 1, 9. convenimus in aedem Concordiae. The porticus Liviae was built by Augustus on the site of a splendid house bequeathed to him by Vedius Pollio, a Roman knight. In this piazza a temple of Concord was built by Livia: cf. Ovid, Fasti vi. 637. From Ovid, Ars. Amat. i. 71, we also learn that the porticus was adorned with pictures—

*nec tibi vitetur quae priscis sparsa tabellis

parce, "sparingly." Construed with addit preces suas. Corte puts a full stop after dissimillimo, and makes parce the imperative of parco. It will then be an entreaty of Spurinna = "spare him."

10. dispicies ipse, "you will judge for yourself." For dispicere cf. i. 18, 5. ii. 10, 5. vii. 33. 5. and numerous instances in book x. For the exact force of dispicere = "to descry," cf. Verg. Aen. vi. 734.

Mauricum: Junius Mauricus, brother of Arulenus Rusticus, and a warm friend of Pliny. To him are addressed i. 14. ii. 18. vi. 14. In iii. 11, 3. P. mentions him in the number of his exiled friends. Cf. also iv. 22, 3. dixit Iunius Mauricus, quo nihil firmitus nihil verius (instances of his plain-speaking then follow); Tacit. Hist. iv. 40; Agric. 45; Martial, epig. v. 28; Plutarch, Galba 8.

huius consilii, i.e. as to whether Regulus was to be pardoned or not. Tr. "in a question of this kind it is becoming that he (Mauricus) should take the lead, and that I should follow."

comitem = sequi eius consilium (Catan.).

11. in praetoris officio, "when I was attending upon the praetor," that is, in the suite of friends and clients which accompanied the new praetor on his entrance upon his duties. Casaubon thus defines officium, "cum honoris causa praesentiam nostram alicui commodamus." Cf. i. 9, 2. officio togae virilis interfui; i. 13, 7. in audiendi officio = "in the attendance of the hearer"; ii. 1, 8; Suet. Julius Caesar 15. relicto statim novorum consulum officio.

persecutus: the word has a notion of persistency.

secretum petit, "sought a private interview." For this use of secretum cf. Suet. Tib. 25, et secretum petenti non nisi adhibito Druso filio dedit; Tacit. Hist. ii. 4. petito secreto futura aperit.

Satrio Rufo: he is mentioned in ix. 13, 17. as taking part in a debate in the senate concerning the guilt of P. Certus.

cui non est etc., implying that Pliny did rival Cicero.

eloquentia saeculi nostri: in Pliny's time there was a distinct line drawn between the ancient and the modern orators. Among the ancients were ranked Cicero, Caesar, Calvus, Brutus, Messala, and others. The moderns dated from Cassius Severus, who was regarded by some as the first to degenerate from the ancient simplicity. Cf. Tacit. Dial. de Orat., ch. 19. antiquorum admiratores Cassium Severum primum adfirmant flexisse ab ista vetere atque directa dicendi via. The whole chapter is worth reading.

says, in explanation of this use of dum, that it is the continuance of the time, not its completion, that is thought of.

locuples: for the wealth of Regulus cf. ii. 20, 13. From Mart. vii. 31. we learn that Regulus had farms in Umbria, at Cales in Campania, in Etruria, and at Tusculum.

factiosus, "has a strong party." For this use of the word cf. Sall. Jug. chs. 8. 15. 27; Cat. 51.

curatur = "is courted" = colitur: cf. iv. 2, 4. (speaking of Regulus), convenitur ad eum mira celebritate. cuncti detestantur oderunt, et quasi probent, quasi diligant, cursant frequentant.

ut haec concussa labantur, "that this influence of Regulus may be shaken and fall to the ground." Cf. Livy, Praef. 9. labente deinde paulatim disciplina velut desidentes primo mores sequatur animo, deinde ut magis magisque lapsi sint, tum ire ceperint praecipites.

infida, "inconstant."

experimentis, "experience;" frequent in post-Augustan literature and in Pliny. Cf. ii. 11, 6. v. 15, 3. viii. 11, 2. ix. 33, 6. x. 87, (19) 3.

16. mihi et tentandi, "whether I shall make any move or remain quiet, I shall have good grounds for what I do, if I follow his advice."

ratio constat is said of an account when properly balanced. Hence it comes to be used of anything that can be approved of, or has good grounds for its existence, or can be satisfactorily accounted for. Catan. says ratio constabit = erit legitima causa. constat enim ratio quando aequa et legitima reddi potest, and he quotes from Valer. Max. iv. 8, 1. liberalitatis duo sunt maxime probabiles fontes, verum iudicium et honesta benevolentia. nam cum ab his oritur, tunc demum ei ratio constat. It is a favourite phrase with Pliny. Cf. i. 9, 1. ii. 4, 4. iii. 18, 10. vii. 6, 4. ix. 2, 5. x. 3, (20) 3; Pan. 38; Tacit. Ann. i. 6. eam conditionem esse imperandi ut non aliter ratio constet quam si uni reddatur.

VI.

To Cornelius Tacitus, the historian, are addressed eleven letters in all.

1. ego ille quem nosti, "I, that Pliny whom you know." Ille, when joined to a verb in the first or second person, must be accompanied by ego or tu. Verg. Aen. i. 617, tunc ille Aeneas; Ovid. Metam. i. 757, ille ego liber, ille ferox tacui; so the ille ego of the four lines prefixed by some ancient editor to the Aeneid.

et quidem pulcherrimos. We might have expected eos quidem. But the omission of the pronoun before quidem is frequent in Pliny and also in Cicero. Cf. Pliny i. 12, 1; iii. 5, 11; v. 8, 5; vi. 5, 1; ix. 23, 2; also Cic. Phil. ii. 43. et quidem immunia; Tusc. iii. 25, opinio magni mali praesentis, et quidem recens opinio talis mali.

ipse? inquis. ipse; "'You' you would say. 'Yes' I."

inertia: the Romans called all occupations which did not concern the State otium, and especially literary occupations. It is in this sense Pliny uses inertia, which Catan. defines as otio litterario. Translate "My quiet literary work." Cf. viii. 9, 1; ix. 6, 1.

ad retia, i.e. the nets which surrounded the wood into which the game were driven by beaters. Cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 131, retia rara, plagae, lato venabula ferro; Hor. Odes. i. 1, 28. seu rupit teretes Marsus aper plagas.

pugillares, "writing tablets." The word is properly an adjective qualifying tabellae, understood, and is derived from pugillus, diminutive of pugnus, i.e. tablets convenient to be held in the hand. Cf. Dic. Antiq. s. v.

ceras; "note books" = tabulas ceratas. Cf. with this passage ix. 36, 6. venor aliquando, sed non sine pugillaribus, ut, quamvis nihil ceperim, non nihil referam.

2. hoc studendi genus. Pliny's master Quintilian does disapprove of this method of study. Cf. Inst. Or. x. 3, 22 seq., non tamen protinus audiendi qui credunt aptissima in hoc nemora silvasque, etc.

iam, "moreover."

silentium. Lord Orrery contrasts this silent method of hunting with ours, and says, "The sages of antiquity were rather poachers than sportsmen; they had no kind of delicacy in the music of the hounds or the composition of the pack. They had no ear; deepness, loudness, or sweetness of cry were undistinguished, and disregarded by the Greeks and Romans. Their dependance was upon their nets, more than upon their dogs."

venationi datur, "is observed in hunting."

3. licebit ... feras, "you ought to take with you."

ut ... sic, "not only ... but also."

lagunculam, "wine flask." Laguncula is a diminutive of laguna, another form of lagna. Cf. the Greek λάγνηος and λάγνηος. It bulged at the sides. Cf. Juvenal xii. 60. ventre lagenae.

non Dianam etc. : this refers to some remark contained in a letter of Tacitus, as we learn from Pliny ix. 10, 1. cupio praeceptis tuis parere; sed aprorum tanta penuria est, ut Minervae et Dianae, quas ais pariter colendas, convenire non possit.

inerrare montibus, a Graecism for in montibus.

VII.

Octavius Rufus was an intimate friend of Pliny, and according to him a poet of no mean merit. Cf. ii. 10, where Pliny urges him to publish his poems. The Baetici (in the south-east of Spain) were prosecuting Gallus, and were desirous of obtaining as their advocate Pliny, who had always been their friend. On the other hand Gallus seeks through Octavius Rufus either to obtain Pliny's advocacy, or, failing that, his neutrality. Pliny here replies, refusing to appear for Gallus, but at the same time promising not to appear for the Baetici.

1. fastigio, "high rank." Paneg. 52. sic fit ut dii summum inter homines fastigium servant; also ii. 1, 2. summum fastigium privati hominis.

τῷ δ' ἕτερον etc., from Homer, Iliad xvi. 250. Achilles, sending Patroclus forth to fight, prays that he may defeat the Trojans and return safely. Zeus grants the first request only, and Patroclus is slain. Cf. Vergil's imitation of this line, Aen. xi. 794.

2. nutu ac renutu, "assent and refusal." renutus is a ἄπαξ λεγόμενον, formed from renuo on the analogy of nutus.

excusare...advocationem, "to excuse myself from appearing instructive article on the Gerunds and Gerundives in Pliny's Letters, see the American Journal of Philology, July, 1888.

VIII.

Pliny writes to Pompeius Saturninus asking him to revise a speech which he had made to his townsmen at the opening of a library which he had given them. He hesitates to publish the speech, giving his reasons, and asks the advice of Saturninus. About Pompeius Saturninus, pleader, historian, and poet, see i. 16. To him are written also v. 21 (9); vii. 7. 15; ix. 38.

destinassetem, "determined." destinare in the sense of constituere, proponere sibi is quite classical. Gierig remarks that Livy often adds the word animo (in animo also found). destino in this sense occurs in i. 12, 9. 13, 7. 22, 12; iii. 5, 20. 6, 6; v. 8, 6. 19, 7; vii. 26, 3; ix. 13, 5; x. 15 (26).

addidisti ergo calcaria etc., "you have put spurs to a willing horse." Cf. also iii. 7. 15, currentem instigem. A proverbial expression, occurring as early as Homer. Cf. Il. viii. 293, Ἀτρέϊδῃ κῦδιστε, τί με σπεύδοντα καὶ αὐτὸν | ὀτρύνεις. It is frequently used by Cicero. Cf. De Orat. ii. 44, currentem, ut aiunt, incitare; Ad Fam. xv. 15, ad pacem currentem, ut aiunt, incitare; Ovid, Ex Pont. ii. 6. 38, nil nocet admisso subdere calcar equo. The same proverb is involved in Ex Pont. ii. 2. 21, acer et ad palmae per se cursurus honores | si tamen hortaris fortius ibit equus. For the word addere, cf. Hor. Epist. ii. 1, 217. vatibus addere calcar.

veniam recusandi laboris, "all excuse for refusing the troublesome task (of revision)."

verecundiam exigendi, "delicacy in requiring it of you."

2. gravari quod depoposcisti, "to refuse a task on which you have insisted." Lewis translates gravari "to be annoyed," but it clearly refers to recusandi above.

desidioso, see i. 2, 3. and 6.

vaces sermoni, "bestow your spare moments on the address." Cf. i. 9, 4. corpori vaco. Sermo is something less studied than oratio. Cf. ad Herenn. iv. ch. 52, of the speeches put into the mouths of "personae" in a description. Scheffer may be right in regarding sermoni as an expression of modesty. But is the use of the word not also due to the fact that the speech is delivered non apud populum, sed apud decuriones; nec in propatulo sed in curia, as P. says: (sec. 16)? Cf. ii. 11, 23. sermone quem ille habuerat in ordine Leptitanorum (the language he had held in the Leptitan Council).

dedicaturus. For a similar use of the word cf. Sueton. Nero 12, dedicatis thermis atque gymnasio; ibid. 31. We might translate "At the inauguration (or opening) of."

3. quaedam adnotasse, "made some criticisms upon it." Adnotare is a technical word, used of a critic placing his mark of approval or disapproval (such as the asterisk or obelus) to a passage. Cf. iii. 5, 10, 11. 13, 5. vii. 17, 7. ix. 26, 5.

generaliter, "in a general way," late Latin. Cicero uses generatim, generaliter being found only in a disputed passage, de Invent. i. 26.

universitati eius etc.: "direct your attention to it as a whole." The classical construction of attendere is either attendere animum ad aliquem (aliquid) or attendere aliquem (aliquid). For universitas, cf. ii. 5, 7. iii. 15, 5. non temere iam nunc de universitate pronuntio, de partibus experiar legendo; also ix. 4, 2.

lima: see note on i. 2, 5. "With your usual acumen" (Lewis).

erit liberum, "it will be open to me." Cf. i. 5, 15. note.

continere, "to suppress, keep back." Cf. v. 12, (13) 4, ero enim vel cautior in continendo, vel constantior in edendo; ix. 25, 3. continendos cavea nidove curabis (writings spoken of as birds); Cic. Att. xiii. 21, commode feceris, si reliquos continueris. Pliny also uses tenere in this sense, ii. 10, 1.

4. quin immo, "nay rather": ii. 11, 11. iii. 16, 4. iv. 9, 18. vii. 23, 1; Paneg. 69. The phrase never occurs in Cicero (except ad Att. i. 13, where there is a v. l. qui nunc), often in Quintilian (Kraut, p. 29). This joining together of two words with similar meaning is a favourite late Latin usage.

emendationis ratio, "the consideration of your corrections." Cf. ii. 14, 14. ratio aetatis.

quae, i.e. emendatio.

dum saepius retractat, "by the numerous retouches to be made."

dum id ipsum experitur, "by this very attempt at revision." id ipsum refers to saepius retractat.

5. scriptis, "the treatment of my subject."

onerabit etc., "will tax (put a strain on) my modesty."

pressus et demissus, "modest and subdued." pressus is the opposite of elatus; pressus stilus is, strictly speaking, a terse style, that dispenses with superfluous ornament. Cf. i. 16, 4. 22, 3. ii. 19, 6. iii. 18, 10. pressius et adstrictius; iv. 14, 3. describimus aliquid modo pressius, modo elatius; vii. 12, 4. sonantius et elatius opposed to pressius et exilius.

parentum = maiorum, "my ancestors."

6. anceps etc., "this is a risky and delicate subject."

lenocinatur, "even when necessity excuses it," lit. "panders to it." Cf. ii. 19, 7.

nam cum ipsi, "for we envy not only virtue itself, but still more the eulogy and proclamation of it."

ea demum etc., "those good deeds and those alone."

in obscuritate et silentio reponuntur etc., "are buried in obscurity and silence"; for a similar form of expression, cf. neglectae iacent, i. 1, 2. Cf. also Verg. Aen. vi. 655, tellure repostos.

7. mecum, sc. cogito.

quidquid est istud, "whatever be its value."

ut nobis, sc. conposuisse debeamus.

rei agendaee necessaria, "necessary to the performance of an action."

parem utilitatem, "the same advantage as before."

8. munificentiae rationem, "the motives of my liberality."

ne longius exempla repetamus, "not to go far afield for instances," cf. altius repetam, Cic. Cluent. § 66. (Fausset's edition).

etiam stilo prosequi, "to grace also in writing." For prosequor cf. § 12; ii. 5, 5; iii. 10, 3. uno libello carissimam mihi et sanctissimam memoriam prosequi.

inmoraremur, "I dwelt long on." v. 6, 42. si materiae inmoratur = "sticks to his subject."

9. nam cum ... restrinxerit, "for, whereas the force of nature constrains men to keep their wealth." Cf. the use of the participle restrinctus in the sense of "niggardly," "sparing," not immediately partake in the benefaction, which could not be expected to embrace at one time all the parents of Comum. These others are to be encouraged to patiently look forward to and try to deserve in their turn the honorem paucorum (the privilege which only a few can enjoy at a time).

13. tunc, “when I delivered this speech.”

intentionem, i. 3, 2. note.

effectumque, “effect.” Some read adfectumque, which would mean “aim,” “purpose,” much the same as intentio.

in ratione edendi, “in publishing.”

propriae laudi = privatae iactantiae.

14. quanto maiore etc., “how much more noble a mind it shows to set the reward of a good deed in one’s own conscience rather than in popular applause.” Cf. Cic. Tuscul. ii. 26, 64. sed tamen nullum theatrum virtuti conscientia maius est; Philipp. v. 13. satis in ipsa conscientia pulcherrimi facii fructus erat; Goldsmith’s “luxury of doing good” (Traveller l. 22). Pliny has probably imitated Cicero. He writes in the same strain in i. 22, 5. For reponatur = the simple ponatur, cf. i. 3, 3. The same usage is frequent in Cicero; cf. Nat. Deor. ii. 21. sidera in deorum numero reponuntur.

sequi enim: commentators say that Pliny had in mind the well-known description of Cato in Sallust, Catiline 54, quo minus gloriam petebat, eo magis sequebatur. The thought also frequently occurs in Cicero.

quod gloriam meruit: the common reading is non meruit. In that case we would have to take meruit, with Casaubon, in the sense of “obtain” = consequi, τυγχάνειν. I can find no instance of merere in this sense in Pliny’s time; as Gierig says, sapit latinitatem ecclesiasticam.

15. adornant, “set off.” The simple verb commoner in this sense, cf. ii. 3, 3. ornat excelse; ix. 9, 3. praedicatione vitam ornari; ix. 33, 11. haec tuo qua miseratione, qua copia deflebis, ornabis? vii. 33, 3. si factum meum tuo ingenio, tuo testimonio ornaveris; Terent. Eun. ii. 1, 8. munus nostrum ornato verbis.

si silenda feceris etc., “if you do a deed not to be talked about, the deed is blamed; if you talk about a praiseworthy deed you have done, it is you who are blamed.”

16. decuriones: the senators of the municipia were so called. They were presided over by two officers called duumviri.

17. adsentationem adclamationemque, "the approbation and applause." In Cicero adclamatio, adclamare seem to be always used in an unfavourable sense.

limine curiae etc., "excluded from the threshold and precincts of the council chamber."

obvia ostentatione conquirere, "to catch by a bare-faced display of it" (my liberality). The reading adsentatione gains some support from the preceding words in speciem ambitionis.

18. cuius auctoritas, "and its authority will be to me a sufficient reason for what I am to do." cuius might refer to an antecedent contained in tuo, "and your authority." Cf. i. 20, 24. where Pliny prefers not to yield to authority but to reason.

VIII.

To Minicius Fundanus are addressed iv. 15; vi. 6. In the first of these Pliny speaks of him as likely to become consul the next year, and writes recommending Asinius Bassus as his quaestor. In v. 16 there is a panegyric on Fundanus' youngest daughter who had died, and the father is spoken of as eruditus et sapiens, ut qui se ab ineunte aetate altioribus studiis artibusque dediderit. See Mommsen in Keil 419.

1. mirum est etc., "strange what a good account we can give or think we can give of each separate day spent in the city, but how poor our general account of a number of days," i.e. we can give a good account of each separate day, but at the end, say of a month, we have nothing to show for the time, i.e. we find the time has been frittered away. For ratio constet see i. 5, 16. note. For cunctaque some read cunctisque, which is evidently the alteration of an ignorant scribe; others iunctisque.

cuncta, i.e. ratio. cuncta ratio is defined by Corte as plurium dierum simul collecta ratio, cuncta being = coniuncta.

2. officio togae etc. : "I have been present at a ceremony of assuming the gown of manhood," i.e. "at a coming of age." For officio, see i. 5, 11, note. Concerning the important family ceremony of throwing off the toga praetexta, and assuming the toga virilis, see Dict. of Antiq. The age at which a youth assumed the manly gown is a matter of dispute. It seems to have been at any time between fourteen and seventeen, according to the wish of the father.

frequentavi, "I have been celebrating." Frequentare is often used of rites or ceremonies. Cf. Ovid, Met. iv. 37, dum cessant aliac commentaque sacra frequentant.

signandum: a will had to be attested by the signatures and seals of seven witnesses, including the familiae emptor and the libripens. For the different ways of making wills see Dict. of Antiq.

in consilium rogavit, "has asked me to act as assessor." A judge was usually assisted by a body of assessors called consilium. These men were also sometimes called consiliarii: cf. Sueton. Tib. 33; Pliny, i. 20, 12, 23; vi. 22, 2; Juven. iii. 162, quando in consilio est Aedilibus; Cic. Pro Murena, 83, si L. Catilina cum suo consilio nefariorum hominum, hac de re posset iudicare [i.e. Cat. sitting in judgment on Murena with his fellow-conspirators as jury or assessors].

frigida, same as inania, "dreary, unprofitable." The two words are found together in iv. 17, 4, omnia ista frigida et inania videntur. Cf. also ix. 2, 1, frigidis negotiis. Cic. ad Att. i. 14, prima contio Pompeii ... non iucunda, miseris, inanis inprobis ... itaque frigebat (fell flat). So ψυχρὸς is used in Greek. Herod. ix. 49, ἐπαρθεῖς ψυχρῇ νύκτῃ; vi. 108, ἐπικουρήν ψυχρήν; Eurip. Iphig. in Aul. 1014, ψυχρὰ μὲν ἐλπίς.

4. postquam lego: postquam or ut may be used with the historical present if the one action can be conceived as being prolonged during the occurrence of the other action. Madvig Lat. Gram. § 338: Roby § 1460. Cf. Sall. Jugur. 76, postquam murum arietibus feriri vident, aurum atque argentum comportant; ibid. 61. Sallust is fond of postquam with the present of video. For other instances in Pliny of postquam with pres. indic., cf. v. 14, 2; vi. 1, 1; vii. 22, 1; Paneg. xiii, xli, xlix.

Laurentino: about the Laurentine villa see ii. 17. In iv. 6, 2 he says of his Laurentine villa, ibi enim plurimum scribo.

To Attius Clemens is also addressed iv. 2.

1. nunc, i.e. under Trajan.

2. cum adulescentulus militarem. At about twenty Pliny served in Syria as military tribune of the third Gallic legion. Cf. also iii. 11, 5, Artemidorum (philosophum) iam tum, cum in Syria tribunus militarem, arcta familiaritate complexus sum. (See Mommsen in Hermes iii. 78.)

penitus et domi etc., "I knew him intimately in his private life." Cf. iv. 17, 5, inspexi enim penitus.

obvius et expositus, "accessible and open to all." The two words in this sense are late Latinity. Cf. Tacit. Ann. ii. 2, prompti aditus obvia comitas. Gierig aptly contrasts Horace's description of Maecenas, Sat. i. 9, 56, difficiles aditus primos habet.

3. atque utinam etc., "and I pray that I may have fulfilled the hopes which he then entertained of me as largely as he has added to his own merits."

aut ego nunc, "or is it that I now" etc. For a similar use of aut in introducing a correction or new suggestion cf. vii. 13, 2, aut es tu super omnes beatus.

4. fictore, "a statuary." nisi ... non = non nisi, "only."

5. advertant, "attract." Cf. ix. 26, 6, omnis enim advertit quod eminet et exstat.

latitudinem, "fullness." Catanaeus would here discover an allusion to the derivation of Plato's name from πλατὺς (according to some from the fullness of his language, according to others from his broad chest). There is no ground for the supposition. Latus is often used of style or speech. Cf. i. 20, 19; Cic. Brutus 31, ut Stoicorum adstrictior est oratio, sic Academicorum liberior et latior; Quint. x. 1, 106, ille concludit adstrictius, hic latius, i.e. the periods of the one are more concise, those of the other fuller; xii. 10, Aeschines nonne his latior etc.

effingit, "he exhibits," "reproduces." Quint. x. 1, 108, mihi videtur M. Tullius effinxisse vim Demosthenis, copiam Platonis. Copiam in this passage is = latitudinem.

inpellat, "overpowers."

6. cana barba. Catanaeus quotes Apollonius Tyaneus (letters against Euphrates), "baculus erat tibi tunc, et cana barba, et ingens, praeter haec nihil." Cf. note on i. 22, 6.

7. horror in cultu, "negligence in his attire."

nulla tristitia, "no sourness."

reverearis occursum, "you would feel awe at his approach, not dread." Cic. De Senect. xi. (of Appius the Blind) metuebant servi, verebantur liberi. Occursus does not occur in Cicero or Cæsar, but does in Livy.

comitas par, "his politeness quite as great."

nec castigat etc., "and without chastising reclaims the wanderer" (Melmoth).

pendens, "hanging on his lips." This construction of pendens without such an addition as ab ore is unusual. Cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 79, pendetque iterum narrantis ab ore; Ovid. Heroid. i. 30, narrantis coniux pendet ab ore viri.

et persuaderi, "and you wish him to persuade you, even after he has persuaded you," i.e. you wish to hear more. Casaubon would read non before persuaserit.

8. duo mares, "two of them sons."

provinciae princeps, "a leading man in his province," iii. 2, 2, Altinatium est princeps. Cf. the use of primi in ii. 13, 4.

inter altissimas conditiones, "though men of high rank sought his daughter's hand." Conditio strictly means a proposal of marriage and the negotiations connected with it. i. 14, 9. Cf. also Ter. Hec. ii. 1, 44, quae vobis placita est conditio datur; Phormio. iv. 1, 13, nam hanc conditionem si cui tulerò extrario; Cic. Cael. 15, hanc licet conditionem quotidie legas.

9. dstringor officio, "my time is taken up with an office" etc. The office was the praefectura aerarii [Saturni]. The charge of the treasury, originally intrusted to the quaestors, was given by Augustus to the praetors, or those who had been praetors. Claudius restored it to the quaestors, but Nero again committed it to those who had been praetors, calling them praefecti aerarii. This arrangement was apparently in force in Trajan's reign. Cf. Sueton. Octav. 36, Claud. 24, Tacit. Ann. xiii. 28. 29. From Pliny Paneg. 91 we gather that the office was apparently tenable for two years. There he calls it officium laboriosissimum et maximum. Officium in the sense of honos, magistratus is late Latin. For distingor cf. i. 24, 3; ii. 14, 1; iii. 5, 19, amicorum officia distingunt; v. 5, 3, quamvis agendis causis distingueretur; vii. 15, 1; ix. 2, 1, distingebar plerumque frigidis negotiis; ix. 25, 3, nunc me rerum actus modice, sed tamen distingit; x. 19, (30) 1, exiguum militum numerum haec cura distingat; Paneg. 94, non te distingimus votis.

sedeo pro tribunali As president of the treasury Pliny would have to give judicial decisions. For pro tribunali = in trib. cf. Caesar Bell. Gall. vi. 3, pro suggestu; Cic. ad Fam. iii. 8, pro tribunali, and other instances in Dictionary. The exact force of pro in the present passage is "in front of and upon."

subnoto libellos, "I countersign petitions." subnoto post-Augustan. Gierig quotes Martial xi. 1, 5, libros non legit ille, sed libellos; nec musis vacat. For libellus in this sense in Pliny cf. v. 13 (14) 6, Nigrinus, tribunus plebis, recitavit libellum disertum et gravem; x. 59, (67), petiit ut libellum mitterem tibi (to Trajan); x. 81, (85) 5, dixi utrique parti ut postulationum suarum libellos darent (give a written statement of their demands); x. 83, (87), acceptumque ab his libellum huic epistolae iunxi; x. 106, (107), ut mitterem tibi libellum per quem indulgentiam pro statu filiae suae implorat. In the sense of an impeachment, or information against, vii. 27, 14, de me libellus inventus est (a memorial against me).

conficio tabulas, "I make up public accounts." Cic. ad Fam. v. 20, rationes confectae me absente sunt; in Verr. ii. 1, 23.

inlitteratissimas, not "most illiterate," but "most un-literary." Cf. ii. 3, 8; vii. 27, 12, est libertus mihi non inlitteratus.

10. nam id ipsum quando etc., "for when have I ever that good fortune?" v. 1. quandoque.

agere negotium publicum, "to take part in public life." For the opinion Gierig compares Cic. de Off. i. 6, cuius (i.e. veri) studio a rebus gerendis abduci contra officium est. virtutis enim laus omnis in actione consistit.

cognoscere, iudicare, etc., "to hear and decide cases, to declare and exercise justice" (to expound and administer the laws).

ipsi, "the philosophers themselves."

iv. 8, tu mihi, etsi nihil crit quod scribas, tamen ipsum scribas velim, te nihil habuisse quod scriberes.

priores, "the men of former times," such as Cicero. Cf. note on i. 5, 11 (eloquentia saeculi nostri): not, as some take it, priores epistulae. Cf. Tacit. Ann. iii. 55, nec omnia apud priores meliora, sed nostra quoque aetas multa laudis et artium imitanda posteris tulit. Priores in this sense occurs only in poetry in the Augustan age, so far as I can discover. On the whole passage most commentators quote Seneca. Epist. 15, mos antiquis fuit, usque ad meam servatus aetatem, primis epistulae verbis adicere, si vales bene est, ego valeo.

XII.

About Calestrius Tiro we learn from vii. 16. that he served in the army along with Pliny, that they were Quaestores Caesaris together, that Tiro held the Tribunate of the Plebs the year before Pliny, but that they were colleagues in the Praetorship, that P. and he often visited at each other's country seats, and that he was made Proconsul of Baetica. In vii. 23. P. says that he loves him as a brother. To him are addressed vi. 1. 22 (where P. advises him, under a recent example, to keep his own counsel while in his province); ix. 5. where P. commends his treatment of the provincials.

1. si iactura dicenda est etc., "If loss is a strong enough word to express my bereavement of so great a man." Iactura was the term applied to the throwing overboard of part of a ship's cargo during a storm, in order to save the ship. Of course the least valuable articles would be sacrificed; cf. Cic. de Off. iii. 23, quaerit, si in mari iactura facienda sit, equine pretiosi potius iacturam faciat, an servulivilis. Pseudo Sallust, ad Caes. ii. 55, de illis potissimum iactura fit, quia pretii minimi sunt. The word came to mean "loss" generally. But it is evident that in P.'s time and in P.'s ear it must have had an echo of the old sense, i.e. the loss of things that could best be spared, and so in the present passage he does not think it strong enough. Ernesti would explain iactura by comparing ii. 1, 10, si tamen fas est aut flere, aut omnino mortem vocare, qua tanti viri mortalitas magis finita quam vita est, i.e. if it is right to designate as loss the ending of the mortality rather than the life of such a man. But, as Gierig says, it is rather out of place for P. to console himself thus at the beginning of a letter in which he states, further on, that he is inconsolable.

Corellius Rufus, cf. iv. 17, 4, where P. speaks of his obligations to him in a letter in which he promises to appear as advocate for his daughter Corellia in a suit. In this same letter we get one of his dying remarks to his daughter, "Multos quidem amicos tibi in longiore vita paravi, praecipuos tamen Secundum et Cornutum." In vii. 11, we find P. selling his share in an estate to Corellia, sister of Corellius, at a lower sum than it might have commanded in an auction, because of his affection for her brother and also for her husband Minicius Justus. In ix. 13, 6, P. says he was in the habit of referring everything to Corellius, who, he says, was far-seeing (quem providentissimum aetatis nostrae sapientissimumque cognovi), but rather cautious and slow to act (cunctantior cautiorque).

ex natura nec fatalis, "neither natural nor inevitable."

Ex natura and fatalis mean the same thing, though some would understand fatalis mors as a violent death, such as that by drowning, murder, falling of a house, etc. Aulus Cellius, Noct. Att. xiii. 1, with reference to Cic. Phil. i. 4, multa mihi impendere videntur praeter naturam etiam praeterque fatum, discusses whether Cic. took praeter naturam and praeter fatum in the same or in two different senses, and inclines to the first opinion. Cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 696, nam quia nec fato, merita nec morte peribat, | sed misera ante diem. Here a violent death is not regarded as happening fato. Mors ex natura et fatalis means, in fact, one brought about by what Cic. de Senect. ii. calls naturae necessitas. Cf. also Cic. Phil. xiii. 33; xiv. 31.

2. utcumque. Almost = although, "However true it may be that there is great comfort." I do not agree with Sheffer and Gierig, who join utcumque with magnum.

ex ipsa necessitate, "from the mere fact that their death is natural." Cic. de Senect. ii., nihil potest malum videri quod naturae necessitas afferat.

arcessita mors, "a voluntary death." Tacit. Ann. i. 5, has quaesita mors. Corte compares Lucan, Phars. iv. 483, extremae momentum abrumpere lucis, | arcessas dum fata manu.

3. vivendi causas, cf. v. 5, 4, vivendi causas quotidie finiunt; Quint. decl. iii. 14, barbaris causam vitae non habentibus; Juvenal viii. 84, et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.

pignora. More properly applied to children, but here used in a wider sense including relations generally. Tacit. Ann. xvi. 26, ne in coniugem, in familiam, in cetera pignora eius saeviret (cetera pignora here are Thrasea's son-in-law Helvidius Priscus and his friends, cf. ch. 28). For pignus reproduced in English literature, cf. Milton's Lycidas, "Ah, who hath reft, quoth he, my dearest pledge?" One is also naturally reminded of Bacon, Essay viii., "He that hath wife and children, hath given hostages to fortune."

4. tam longa, tam iniqua valetudine, "such long ill health." Valetudo means a state of body either good or bad. In Pliny the word is almost always used of ill health. For instances of the word, cf. i. 12, 9, 11. 22, 1, 7; ii. 1, 4, 9. 20, 7; iii. 7, 2, causa mortis valetudo; iv. 24, 3, huic aetas et valetudo silentium suasit; v. 16, 4, novissimam valetudinem; v. 19, 9, necessitates valetudinis; vii. 1, 1, pertinax valetudo; vii. 2, 5, vicesimo valetudinis die; vii. 19, 1, angit me Fanniae valetudo; viii. 24, 5, adversa valetudine; ix. 22, 1, magna me sollicitudine affecit Passieni Pauli valetudo; x. 5, (4) 1, gravissima valetudine vexatus.

pretia vivendi, "enhancements of life" (L.) = vivendi causas, cf. also vitae retinacula, sec. 8. The various commentators quote Plin. Hist. Nat. 22, 6, addidere vivendi pretia deliciae luxusque.

ut ipsum audiebam. Ed. Rom. Corte and others insert praedicantem before audiebam.

patrius hic illi. Corellius' gout was hereditary, a necessary apology in times when gout was supposed to arise from the intemperance of the sufferer.

ut alia, i.e. property.

5. sanctitate, "purity of life."

quoad viridis aetas, "So long as he was young and vigorous." For this transferred use of viridis cf. vii. 24, 1, ad novissimam

C. Geminium. Letters to him vii. 1. 24, viii. 5, 22, ix. 11, 30. Keil, however, in all these places, reads Gemino, relying chiefly on MS. Med. In that case a different person is probably referred to. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 423.

revocari ad vitam, "induced to live on," cf. i. 22, 9.

10. Iulius Atticus. I cannot identify him, as Catanaeus does, with the Atticus addressed by Martial vii. 3, 2.

κέκρικα, "I am resolved." The other reading κέκμηκα must mean "my illness is over," "enough of illness."

11. scio. For similar repetition, cf. ix. 21, 2, irascaris, scio : et irascaris merito, id quoque scio.

superstitibus suis, "leaving a family to survive him"; a consolation, not a sorrow, to a Roman to whom the continuity of the family was so important, as it was rarer at this period.

12. firmissimi, "vigorous"; cf. infirmus, sec. 13. Others read fortissimi, and fortis is used in this sense in iv. 1, 7, vi. 4, 3, vii. 23, 1.

vitae meae testem. Cf. iv. 17, 6, ille (Corellius) meus in petendis honoribus suffragator et testis.

in summa. Ad summam is more frequent in the more classical writers, but in summa is also found.

contubernali Calvisio, i.e. C. Calvisius Rufus. To him are addressed letters ii. 20; iii. 1, 19; v. 7; viii. 2; ix. 6. He was a decurio of Comum, v. 7, 3, 4.

XIII.

[Q.] Sosius Senecio is probably the same man to whom P. addresses iv. 4, though Catanaeus makes the latter person Sosius Pappus. He must not be confounded with Herennius Senecio mentioned in i. 5, 3; see note. Sosius was a friend of Plutarch, who dedicated to him his "Lives" and several other writings.

proventum. Corte compares Quint. xii. 10, 11, efflorescat oratorum ingens proventus. For other examples see Forcellini. Cf. also Demosth. de Cor., 245. 61, φορὰν προδοτῶν. We are reminded of the first words of Charlotte Brontë's Shirley.

Aprili. Cf. Juv. iii. 9, Augusto recitantes mense poetas. The times of recitation no doubt varied. August was too hot a month. In viii. 21, 2, the month of July is chosen for a recitation—Iulio mense, quo maxime lites interquiescunt.

studia, “learning.” P. uses the word elsewhere also in connexion with recitations. Cf. viii. 12, 1, colit studia (of a reciter).

proferunt se et ostentant. Used in a laudatory sense. Cf. vii. 25, 1 (of reciters) qui studia sua proferunt; also ix. 3, 2, materiam se proferendi.

2. stationibus. Public lounges (λέσχαι) where people met for talk, amusement etc. Cf. ii. 9, 5; also Juven. xi. 4, convictus, thermæ, stationes, omne theatrum. The porticoes seem also to have been used for such purposes. Thus Martial, xi. 1, advises his book, if it wishes to be read, to seek the porticoes, where people have leisure. For the use of statio in a military and naval sense, see Dictionary.

tempus audiendi, “the time when they ought to be listening.” The Vatican and Dresden MSS. read audiendis.

subinde, “from time to time.” Cf. ii. 7, 6, x. 39, (48) 2, fulturæ ac substructiones quibus subinde suscipitur.

dixerit præfationem. The verb here shows that the introduction was not part of the book recited, but some introductory remarks. The nature of the remarks would of course vary. Cf. for instance Mart. iii. Ep. 18, where the reciter complains that he has got a sore throat.

perfrixisse tuas questa est præfatio fauces. cum te excusaris, Maxime, quid recitas?

For an instance of a præfatio in Pliny, vid. viii. 21. ad init.

evolverit librum, “read,” i.e. unrolled his manuscript till he has come to the wooden roller at the bottom. See Dict. of Antiq. Liber.

simpliciter et libere, “openly and without disguise.” For simpliciter cf. v. 2, 2, epistulas simpliciter ingratas; v. 3, 1, me amice simpliciterque reprehenderent. Simpliciter is most frequently used in a good sense. For libere cf. iii. 9, 20, id ipsum dixi et libere et varie.

3. Nonianum. M. Servilius Nonianus, died A.D. 59, was a historian of Claudius' time, and was princeps civitatis. Quintilian, x. 1, 102, says of him, et ipse a nobis auditus est, clari vir ingenii et sententiis creber, sed minus pressus quam historiae auctoritas postulat; Tacit. Ann. xiv. 19, Servilius diu foro, mox tradendis rebus Romanis celebris et elegantia vitae. Persius is said to have regarded him as a second father. Sueton. Vita Persii, coluit ut patrem Servilium Nonianum.

subitum : this use of the adjective for the adverb is common in the poets, with adjectives which denote relations of time and place. Verg. Aen. viii. 465, Aeneas se matutinus agebat; Horace, Epod. xvi. 51, nec vespertinus circumgemit ursus ovile. Madvig, Lat. Gram. § 300, obs. 2.

4. quia non perdidit, “just because he has not lost one.” I incline to Gierig’s emendation perdidit as expressing P.’s opinion, not that of the visitors to the stationes, but it has no manuscript authority. If perdiderit be read we must take the remark as a lepor, or subtlety, of Pliny’s, hard to be brought out in English. The idler would be supposed to say, diem perdidit quia non in stationibus fui. Instead of the last three words Pliny artfully substitutes as the man’s assertion non perdiderit, “I have lost a day because I have not — lost it.” The subtlety is too subtle.

5. superbia, “contempt.”

defui, “failed to attend hardly anyone’s recital.” Cf. viii. 12, 2, mihi defuit nunquam.

qui studia, etc. : “who loves learning without loving me too.”

6. destinaveram : i. 8, 1, note.

creditor : “as having established a claim on them to an audience for my own works.”

audiendi officio : cf. i. 5, 11, note.

perit gratia, etc., “the compliment loses its flavour if a return is asked.”

XIII.

Junius Mauricus, brother of Arulenus Rusticus. About Arulenus cf. i. 5, 2, note; about Mauricus cf. i. 5, 10, note.

1. foverit, “fostered,” cf. i. 5, 2, note.

ut laudandus viderer, “he made me think myself worthy of praise.” Catanaeus interprets viderer = credere, “be thought worthy of praise by others.”

of the ornamenta praetoria. The latter embraced only the insignia of the rank, without any of its political rights. It was the shadow without the substance. See Marquardt, Handbuch der Röm. Alt. i. p. 439. We also hear of adlectio inter quaestorios. Cf. Sueton. Vesp. 9, amplissimos ordines, et exhaustos caede varia, et contaminatos veteri negligentia, purgavit supplevitque, submotis indignissimis, et honestissimo quoque Italicorum ac provincialium adlecto.

ambitioni dicam an dignitati, "this show, or shall I call it dignity." Juven. iii. 182, ambitiosa paupertate = pretentious poverty. Compare what P. says of Arrianus Maturus, iii. 2, 4, se in equestri gradu tenuit, cum facile posset adscendere altius. Catan. takes ambitioni = 'desire of office'; but if so the opposition between it and dignitas is lost.

6. municipio Patavino, Patavium (Padua) the capital of the Veneti.

contigit et etc., "he has been fortunate in having as uncle P. Acilius." We know nothing about this Acilius. Perhaps he may be the person to whom iii. 14 is addressed. There is also an Acilius Rufus mentioned (as consul designatus) v. 20, 6; also in vi. 13, 5.

in summa, i. 12. 12, note.

7. quamquam in etc., "united withal to the greatest modesty." For quamquam without the verb cf. ii. 17, 4; ii. 19, 7. Numerous other instances occur in Pliny.

percucurrit, "held in rapid succession." Sueton. Nero 3, restitutus in patriam amplissimos honores percucurrit. In Pliny vi. 6, 2, we have decucurri (not of course implying rapidity), and cursus honorum, decursus honorum are frequently used by Cicero. The metaphor in percucurrit is either from the stadium or from sailing.

necessitatem ambiendi remisit; because the consulship, which he had yet to hold, was in the gift of the Emperor.

8. est illi facies etc., "his face shows his gentle birth, with its ruddy hue, often deepened by a blush." Corte thinks multo rubore a gloss on multo sanguine. Gierig suggests pudore for rubore. There seems to me nothing objectionable in the passage. It simply means that Acilianus had a bright complexion and often blushed.

quidam senatorius decor, "a bearing worthy of a senator."

9. imaginor, late Latin.

publicos mores: Corte aptly quotes Juvenal iii. 160, quis gener hic placuit censu minor atque puellae | sarcinulis impar?

leges civitatis. We have mentioned before that by the Lex Iudiciaria of C. Gracchus, B.C. 122, all persons possessing property to the amount of 400,000 sesterces became virtually equites, and had the iudicia, or right of acting as jurors in criminal trials. By the Lex Roscia, B.C. 67 (modified under the emperors), those whose census was 400,000 sesterces had the privilege of occupying the first fourteen rows of benches behind the senators in the theatre. A census senatorius was introduced by Augustus, and fixed finally at a million sesterces, unless we believe Suetonius (Octav. 41), who says that the senatorius census was at one time fixed by Augustus at 800,000 sesterces, and ultimately raised by him to 1,200,000 sesterces. It is to laws of this kind that P. here refers.

in conditionibus delegendis, "in making matches": cf. i. 10. 8, note.

calculus ponendus est, "this also must be taken into account": cf. ii. 19, 9, also v. 2, 1, parem calculum ponere (cum) = to make an equal return; Juven. ix. 40, ponatur calculus.

10. supraque ... quam. For the adverbial use of supra cf. Sallust. Catil. 5, supra quam cuique credibile est.

onerare, "overweight him" (L.), i.e. make people expect too much of him, and thus make it harder for him to fulfil their expectations. Cf. i. 8, 5.

XV.

About Septicius Clarus see i. 1.

1. promittis ad cenam, sc. te venturum. The omission occurs frequently. Cf. Plaut. Stich. iv. 2, 16, ad cenam alio promisi foras; Petronius. Sat. 10, quia tamquam scholastici ad cenam promissimus.

dicetur ius etc., "sentence will be pronounced; you will pay back what I have spent on you to the last farthing." The as was regarded as the unit in Roman fractions, e.g. haeres ex asse = "heir to the whole." By a natural extension of meaning it is often spoken of as all that is wanting to make up the unit, i.e. the last fraction. Cf. Hor. Sat. i. 1, 43, quod si comminuas vilem redigatur ad assem. Keil (larger edition 1870) reads dicitur ius, but suggests dicetur, which he adopts in his smaller edition of 1876. The older editions read dicitur ius, with a comma, which Catan. would explain = si dicitur.

2. lactucae singulae, “a lettuce apiece.” The distributive numerals singulae, ternae, bina probably hint at the frugality of the feast, though they may here be used playfully by P. as if he were making up a bill, without his meaning that each guest had that and no more. The lettuce is mentioned first here, as in Horace, Sat. ii. 8, 8. It appears to have come at the end of the feast in earlier times, if we may judge from Mart. xiii. 14—

claudere quae cenas lactuca solebat avorum, dic mihi cur nostras inchoat illa dapes?

cochleae. Snails were a favourite dish with the Romans, and were often kept and fattened in vivaria. The most famous were the Illyrian and African. In Hor. Sat. ii. 4, 58 Catus prescribes snails and onions as a fillip to the jaded drinker—

tostis marcentem squillis recreabis et Afra potorem cochlea; nam lactuca innatat acri post vinum stomacho.

Cf. also Theocr. xiv. 17. βολβός τις κοχλίας ἐξηρέθη.

ova. Eggs were frequently used at the beginning of a Roman dinner. Hence Horace Sat. i. 3, 6, ab ovo usque ad mala = from the beginning to the end of the meal. In Sat. ii. 4, 12 the epicure Catus begins his gastronomic lecture with the eggs.

alica, “broth.” Alica was made of spelt, and sometimes used as a drink, sometimes in the form of broth or gruel. See Dict. Ant.

nive: snow was often used to cool wine. Cf. Mart. v. 64—

sextantes, Calliste, duos infunde Falerni, tu super aestivas, Alcime, solve nives.

computabis, “you will have to reckon.”

Echini were sea-urchins : cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 4, 33, ostrea Circeis, Miseno oriuntur echini.

Gaditanas, "dancing girls from Cadiz."

invidisti etc., "you have deprived of a pleasure, if not yourself, at all events me; indeed, I may say yourself as well as me." If the thing were expressed it would be in the ablative in accordance with Pliny's usage : cf. i. 10, 12, note. See Roby, § 1331.

4. simplicius, incautius, "with less pretence or reserve." in summa : cf. i. 12, 12, note.

et nisi postea etc., "and if you don't after that prefer to decline other people's invitations, pray decline mine for ever." For the other construction of excusare, see Dictionary.

EPIST. XVI.

Erucius here may either be the Erucius Clarus mentioned in ii. 9, 4, or his son Sextus Erucius Clarus, about whom see the same letter. About Pompeius Saturninus see introduction to i. 8.

hunc dico nostrum, "I mean my countryman of that name." There were other Saturnini. That Saturninus was a countryman of Pliny is probable from the fact that Pliny sent his speech to the Comenses for Saturninus to revise. Others translate nostrum = "our friend."

quam varium flexibile, multiplex, "how rich, versatile, and many-sided." He was a pleader, historian, and poet.

tenet, habet, possidet. Gesner says the words are borrowed from legal phraseology. Here, however, they have no technical meaning.

2. sive meditata etc., "whether his speech be prepared or impromptu." Meditata is used passively here, as is frequent with the perf. participles of deponents. See Roby, § 734. For subita cf. ii. 3, 2; Cic. de Orat. i. 33, etsi utile est etiam subito saepe dicere; ibid., subitam et fortuitam orationem.

adsunt aptae crebraeque sententiae, "his speeches abound in happy aphorisms." For instances of sententiae cf. Quint. viii. 5, who there says that they were minus crebrae apud antiquos. Keil in his smaller edition adopts acutae, the reading of the Dresden MS.

gravis et decora constructio, "his periods are majestic and graceful." constructio, called compositio by Quint. ix. 4, is the artful arrangement of words. Cf. Plin. v. 8, 10, alia verba, alius sonus, alia constructio; Cic. de Orat. i. 5, oratio conformanda non solum electione, sed etiam constructione verborum; Brut. 78, verborum apta et quasi rotunda constructio.

sonantia verba et antiqua, "his words have a classic ring about them." For antiqua see i. 5, 11, note.

cum impetu quodam pervehuntur, "when borne along on the impetuous stream of delivery." v.l.s. praevehuntur, provehuntur, praetervehuntur. Such variants are common. The metaphor of a stream as applied to eloquence is of frequent occurrence. Cf. Hor. Od. iv, 2. 5, monte decurrens velut amnis, imbres quem super notas aluere ripas fervet immensusque ruit profundo

Pindarus ore;

Hor. Sat. i. 7, 26, ruebat | flumen ut hibernum; v. 28, salso multoque fluenti; Juv. x. 118, eloquio sed uterque perit orator; utrumque | largus et exundans leto dedit ingenii fons; ibid. 128 (of Demosthenes), torrentem et pleni moderantem frena theatri.

si retractentur, "if you afterwards read them." Retractare = "to take in hand again," used here of reading what has been heard before. The word is most frequently used by Pliny in the sense of "revision," e.g. i. 8, 4. In vii. 24, 8, we meet with gaudium retractare = "to renew a pleasure"; vi. 5, 2, fnitam causam retractavit = "re-argued a question already decided."

3. cuilibet veterum, brachylogy for orationibus cuiuslibet.

quorum est aemulus. For aemulus with dat., chiefly of things, see Dictionary.

4. luce, "lucidity."

contionibus, the speeches which occur in his histories, such as those which Livy, Tacitus, and Thucydides attribute to their historical characters.

idem qui in orationibus est. Keil, who has this in his large edition, in his smaller edition adopts the reading of MS. Dresd., eadem quae in orationibus vis est.

pressior, circumscriptior, adductior. These words all mean the same thing here, though the metaphor contained in each is different. Gierig tries to give a different meaning to each, but is too elaborate.

5. Versus: cf. iv. 27, 4, canto carmina versibus minutis (i.e. hendecasyllables) his olim quibus et meus Catullus et Calvus veteresque.

Catullus aut Calvus. Last note. Cf. also Hor. Sat. i. 10, 19, nil praeter Calvum et doctus cantare Catullum. About Calvus as an orator cf. i. 2, 2, note.

amaritudinis, referring to his satyric poems.

6. tam doctam politamque, “such a finished scholar.”

7. remitter; the opposite of intendere, the metaphor being from a bow, cf. Cic. de Senect. xi., intentum animum tamquam arcum habebat. For the middle use of remitter, cf. Roby § 1417.

non tanquam eundem, “as if he were always new.”

8. an si etc. For the general sense cf. Hor. Epist. ii. 1. 20, (populus) cetera nequiquam simili ratione modoque aestimat et, nisi quae terris semota suisque temporibus defuncta videt, fastidit et odit;

also Odes iii. 24. 31,

virtutem incolumem odimus, sublatam ex oculis quaerimus invidi;

cf. also Pliny vi. 21, 1, sum ex iis qui mirantur antiquos, non tamen, ut quidam, temporum nostrorum ingenia despicio.

9. malignumque, “ungenerous.” Malignus means literally stingy, niggardly, opposed to benignus. Cf. ii. 17, 15, terra malignior, opposed to ferax. Also Hor. Od. i. 28, 23.

verum etiam. Pliny is fonder of this stronger form (Roby § 2209) than of sed etiam. Verum etiam is very rare in Cicero. In Pliny, besides numerous other places, we find it in i. 5, 17. 7, 3. 8, 3. 8, 11. 19, 2. 20, 16; ii. 3, 7. 7, 5. 18, 5. He uses non modo }

non solum } verum etiam.
non tantum }

Non modo ... sed etiam occurs only once in the first two books, ii. 7, 7. Non modo ... sed, rare in Cicero, frequent in Livy, occurs three times in Pliny, ii. 11, 6; vii. 9, 9; Pan. ii. 24.

The last sentence of the letter is, as Gierig says, redundant.

as our forefathers paid to the people "over the water." The Bruti and Cassii were especially honoured. So Tacitus, Ann. iii. 76, speaking of the funeral of Junia, praefulgebant Cassius atque Brutus eo ipso quod effigies eorum non visebantur.

4. statuam, "one's own statue."

EPIST. XVIII.

C. Suetonius Tranquillus is best known by his Lives of the Twelve Caesars. To him Pliny addresses iii. 8, granting a request to transfer a military tribuneship obtained for him by Pliny to his kinsman Caesennius Silvanus. In v. 10 Pliny urges him to publish. In ix. 34 Pliny asks his advice about a recitation which he is causing his own freedman to give instead of giving it himself. In i. 24 and in x. 94 Pliny calls him his contubernalis, and in the last letter asks Trajan to grant him the ius trium liberorum, which Trajan grants. He had been writer under Trajan, and was for some time private secretary to Hadrian.

That Pliny believed in dreams and ghosts is evident from his account of the haunted house at Athens (which reads so modern) and from the other details given in vii. 27.

pauculos dies ... excusem, "beg an adjournment for a few days, at least for the first day." For excusem cf. i. 7, 2.

καὶ γὰρ κ.τ.λ., Hom. Iliad i. 63.

2. eventura soleas etc., "whether your dreams usually come true, or their contraries." Pliny in what follows hints that dreams are to be interpreted by contraries. Notice the omission of the interrogative particle in the first member of the double question. This is Pliny's most frequent usage, occurring not less than 40 times. Utrum ... an occurs 5 times, ne ... an 9 times, utrumne ... an only once.

3. advoluta genibus: cf. ix. 21, 1, advolutusque pedibus meis. So Livy xxviii. 34, advolutus genibus. In viii. 37, however, Livy has genibus se omnium advolvens. Tacit. Ann. i. 13 has the simple accusative Tiberii genua advolveretur. In Ann. xi. 30, xii. 18, we find provolvi genibus.

in quadruplici iudicio, "in the four centumviral courts." See i. 5, 4, note. The centumviri originally consisted of 105 members, three from each of the 35 tribes. Under the Empire their number was increased to 180. The 180 centumviri were divided into four courts. They sat together in the Basilica Julia, and each court seems, so far as we can gather, to have decided separately. Our information about the working of the four courts is very imperfect. Cf. v. 9, (21) 1; vi. 33, 2; Quintil. Inst. Or. xii. 5, 6, *certe cum in Basilica Julia diceret (Trachalus) primo tribunali, quattuor autem iudicia, ut moris est, cogerentur, atque omnia clamoribus fremere-*nt. In iv. 24, 1, Pliny probably refers to the present trial, subit recordatio egisse me iuvenem aequae in quadruplici. For an account of the Basilica Julia see Burn's Rome and the Campagna, p. 115.

contra potentissimos civitatis. From ii. 14, 2, we learn that the court must have subsequently degenerated both in the quality of its advocates and in the importance of the cases.

excutere mentem=ἐκπλήττειν φρένας, "to upset me." excutere in this sense occurs only here in Pliny: The use is poetical. In Cic. Tusc. iv. 8, conturbatio is defined as metum excutientem cogitata (banishing one's thoughts, taking away the power of thinking).

4. εἰς οἰωνός κ.τ.λ., Hom. Iliad xii. 243, used by Hector to Polydamas. Cf. Cic. de Senect. iv. 11, augurque cum esset (Q. Fabius Maximus) dicere ausus est optimis auspiciis ea geri quae pro reipublicae salute gererentur.

nam mihi patria etc., "for my duty seemed to me to be my country, and, if possible, dearer than my country." fides=his duty to his client.

5. dispice: cf. i. 5, 10, note.

sub hoc exemplo, "with this precedent before you." Cf. i. 2, 5; ii. 6, 6; iii. 18, 2, sub exemplo praemonerentur; vi. 5, 2, sub exemplo legis ambitus.

id ipsum rescribe, "write back an answer to that effect."

aliquam stropham, "some way of getting out of it." Stropha means a twist, turn, evasion. A metaphor from wrestling. Cf. Mart. iii. 7, nihil stropharum est: iam salarium dandum est. Plat. Rep. 405 c. πάσας στροφὰς στέφεισθαι. Gierig calls attention to the cacophonous endings in am in this sentence.

alia ratio tua, "your position is different from what mine was."

istud, "a case such as yours."

aegre quidem sed tamen: cf. i. 20, 25; ii. 17, 23. A favourite form of expression occurring frequently in Pliny.

XVIII.

To Romatius Pirmus is also written iv. 29.

suscipere et augere dignitatem, "charge myself with the advancement of your rank."

2. centum millium, about £850.

apud nos, i.e. Comenses.

For decurio cf. i. 8, 16.

perfruamur, "have the great pleasure of seeing you."

equestres facultates: see i. 14, 9, note on leges civitatis.

3. ego ne illud quidem, "I do not even give you the advice which it would be my duty to give, if I did not know that you would do as I wish without advice—to enjoy the rank given by me with all possible discretion, as having been given by me. For a distinction must be all the more jealously guarded when in it you have at the same time to cherish the kindness of a friend." In ii. 13, 9, beneficia tueri is used of the benefactor.

XX.

aeque ... ut. aeque ... ut occurs only in this place in Pliny. It is contrary to Ciceronian and classical usage (Madvig, de Fin. i. 20, p. 126). aeque ... quam occurs in Pliny in ii. 15, 1; iii. 4, 9; v. 19, 5. aeque ... ac in v. 8, 2; viii. 5, 3. 20, 10. aeque ... quam is (with the exception of Livy and Plautus) post-classical.

2. custodiendam, frequent in later Latin for servandam.

praevaricatio, "deliberate bad pleading"; the betrayal of his client's cause by an advocate by defective pleading or collusion with the opposite party. Praevaricari in its strict technical sense is used of the accuser who from corrupt motives tries to obtain the acquittal of the accused. Cf. Cic. pro Cluent. ch. 32. In the same speech (xxi.) it is, however, used of the advocate for the defence. The best known instance of praevaricatio is the attempt of Caecilius to impeach Verres with the object of securing his acquittal.

inculcanda, infigenda, repetenda, "driven home, impressed, and repeated."

recisa ac purgata, “cut down and pruned.”
coartasse, i.e. eum coartasse.

9. at, “but it may be said.” At introduces an objection or the answer to an objection.

actio ... oratio. Actio is a speech for the hearer, oratio a speech for the reader.

exemplar et quasi ἀρχέτυπον, “the model and original.”

10. ut in Verrem: cf. Cic. in Verrem iv. 3, where Cicero professes to have forgotten the name of the artist of the Cancphorae which Verres stole, and to be reminded of it by one of his hearers. Quint. ix. 2, 61, (wrongly given as xi. 2, 61, by both Gierig and Döring) also quotes this passage.

iustum et debitum tempus, “a due and proper length of time for its delivery,” not, as Gesner says, “for preparation at home.” The times allowed for delivery varied at various periods. Pompey is said to have limited the speech of the accuser to two hours and that of the defender to three. In ii. 11, 14, Pliny in the trial of Marius Prisons spoke five hours, having been allowed sixteen clepsydrae, twelve at first and four afterwards, which he would share with Tacitus who appeared with him for the prosecution. In iv. 9, 9, Pliny mentions six hours as having been allowed by the law to the accuser and nine to the accused. In vi. 2, 5, however, we read of a custom having grown up of shortening the time of pleading, so few as two clepsydrae, one clepsydra, and even half a one being asked and allotted.

11. in angustissimis causis, “in the most trivial cases.”

12. in consilio fui, “acted as assessor.” Cf. Juven. iii. 162, quando in consilio est Aedilibus.

res maximas trahunt, “involve the most important consequences.”

13. suae quisque inventioni favet, “each one prides himself on his own acuteness.” fortissimum, “as the strongest argument.”

quod teneant etc., “to grasp and recognise as their own.”

14. cum simul adessemus, “when we appeared in a case together.”

iugulum, “the throat of a case.” We should talk rather of the “heart” of a case. Quint. viii. 6, 51, speaks of iugulum petere as a common forensic metaphor. Cf. Cic. Cluent, § 68, duobus iugulatum praeiudiciis. (Fausset's note.)

15. πάντα λίθον κινῶ. For the proverb cf. Eurip. Herac. 1002.

16. exerceo, "cultivate," a poetical use of the word. Cf. Verg. Georg. i. 220, exercebis humum; Aen. vii. 798, Rutullosque exercent vomere colles; ibid. x. 141, ubi pinguia culta exercentque viri; Hor. Epod. ii. 3, paterna rura bobus exercet suis.

17. inperspicua occurs only here so far as I can find.

Eupolide. Eupolis, Cratinus, and Aristophanes were the three great poets of the old Attic comedy (cf. Hor. Sat. i. 4, 1). The fragment from Eupolis is preserved for us entire in the Scholia to Aristophanes Acharn. 504 (529), Bekker—κράτιστος οὗτος ἐγένετ' ἀνθρώπων λέγειν, ὅπότε παρέλθοι, ὥσπερ οἱ ἀγαθοὶ δρομεῖς, ἐκκαίδεκα ποδῶν ἤρει λέγων τοὺς ῥήτορας· ταχὺς λέγειν μὲν πρὸς δὲ γ' αὐτοῦ τῷ τάχει, κ.τ.λ.

πειθῶ τις: cf. Quint. x. 1, 82, quod de Pericle veteris comoediae testimonium est ... in labris eius sedisse quandam persuadendi deam. So Ennius ap. Cic. de Senect. xiv, calls M. Cethegus Suadae medullam. Cic. de Orat. iii. 34, translates πειθῶ by lepor;—cuius in labris veteres comici leporem habitasse dixerunt.

οὕτως ἐκήλει = "such was his charm."

τὸ κέντρον κ.τ.λ., not "left his sting," but "left his thrill." Cf. Cic. de Orat. iii. 34, tantamque in eo vim fuisse, ut in eorum mentibus, qui audissent, quasi aculeos quosdam relinqueret. Plato, Phaedon 40 (evidently quoting from Eupolis), says, ὥσπερ μέλιττα τὸ κέντρον ἐγκαταλιπὼν οἰχήσομαι, using τὸ κεντ. ἐγκ. in the first sense. Cf. also Pliny ii. 19, 4.

18. facultate, here, as often, = "oratorical power."

qui non pungit, sed infigit, "who does not merely thrill, but also impresses." Cf. § 3.

19. comicus alter: Aristophanes, Acharn. 531 (Meineke).

ἤστραπτ', ἐβρόντα, κ.τ.λ. Quint. ii. 16, 19, ut non loqui et orare, sed, quod Pericli contigit, fulgurare et tonare videaris; ibid. xii. 10, 24, quem fulminibus et caelesti fragori comparant comici; ibid. § 65, hanc vim et celeritatem in Pericle miratur lata, "full," opposed to amputata et abscissa. Cf. i. 10, 5, note.

Eupolis, hanc fulminibus Aristophanes comparat, haec est vere dicendi facultas.

perturbat et miscet, meant to be a translation of συνεκύκα, "startles and rouses all."

20. qui infra rem ... dicit, "whose speech falls short of his subject."

21. non inplesse, "not to have come up to its requirements."

ille ... hic, "the latter ... the former." Cf. Livy xxx. 30, melior tutiorque est certa pax quam sperata victoria; haec (pax) in tua illa in deorum potestate est; and many other instances. The reverse of the common usage.

quod, "which latter fault."

limatiore, "more polished."

maioris, "more vigorous."

22. illum Homericum ἀμετροεπήν, "that never-ending talker in Homer," i.e. Thersites, Il. ii., 212.

hunc, Ulysses (Il. iii, 222), whose words fell thick as the snowflakes of winter.

et ille, Menelaus. Il. iii, 214, παῦρα μὲν, ἀλλὰ μάλα λιγέως ἐπεὶ οὐ πολίμυθος οὐδ' ἀφαρτροεπής.

Cf. Quint. xii. 18, 64, nam et Homerus brevem quidem cum iucunditate et propriam (id enim est non deerrare verbis) et carentem supervacuis eloquentiam Menelao dedit.

crebram etc., "thick-falling, constant, and copious."

at, "but, you may say."

23. quorum delicias desidiamque etc., "whose lazy dilettantism it is absurd to regard as a standard." Cf. ii. 5, 4, fastidium deliciasque.

24. ratione quam auctoritate: cf. i. 8, 18, note.

25. si mihi accederes, "should you agree with me." For this use of accedere cf. iv. 15, 15, si precibus meis tu potissimum adiutor accesseris; iv. 10, 3, confido accessurum te sententiae meae; viii. 14, 24, accessit releganti, "went over to the side of him who was for banishment"; x. 40, (49) 1 (Trajan to

2. privati iuris, etc. See Just. Inst. i. 2, 4, publicum ius est quod ad statum Romanae rei spectat, privatum quod ad singulorum utilitatem pertinet. Also Holland's Jurisprudence, 3rd edition, p. 297.

rerum, exemplorum, "facts and precedents."

antiquitatis, "what knowledge of old times!" So of Spurinna iii. 1, 6, quantum ibi antiquitatis! This passage reminds us of Cic. de Senect. iv. (of Q. Fab. Maximus), quanta notitia antiquitatis!

abditum, "abstruse."

3. quanta sermonibus eius fides, quanta auctoritas, "how accurate and well-supported is all that he says!"

pressa. Corte interprets the word as "brief." Gierig, following Cellarius, "modest" (cf. i. 8, 5, note). Gesner takes the word in an active sense = reprimens aliquamdiu sententiam. I see no essential difference between Gierig's and Gesner's interpretations, and the word "modest" covers both.

discernit, expendit, "discriminates and weighs."

4. cultu, "in his mode of life."

5. ornat haec, "all this is enhanced."

6. praeferunt = prae se ferunt, "who show off their love of wisdom by their outward appearance." habitu corporis refers to the long beard and robe and staff affected by would-be philosophers which Lucian so often ridicules. Buchner quotes the saying of the rhetorician Herodes Atticus, video barbam et pallium; philosophum non video.

gymnasia sectatur, "haunt the gymnasia." So Cicero de Orat. i. 13, omnia gymnasia atque omnes philosophorum scholae. See also ibid. ii. 5. For sectatur cf. ii. 17, 28. Gymnasia and philosophical schools became identical terms.

in toga negotisque, "his duties as a citizen."

advocatione, "by his presence in court." consilio, "his private advice." Before Imperial times advocatus never meant a pleader, but a jurist who gave his advice on points of law.

7. etiam. Construe not with primo loco, as Gierig, but with fortitudine. Etiam is frequently used by Pliny after the last member of an asyndeton, simply as a connecting particle, and without expressing emphasis. Cf. sections 9 and 12; also ii. 1, 6. 3, 9. 6, 4. 10, 7. For other instances see Kraut, p. 28.

differat, "keeps at bay," i.e. puts off its gratification. Cf. Ovid, Met. vi. 366, distulit ira sitim.

transmittat, "endures," i.e. "passes through," or may it not mean "disregards" = "allows to pass"? For some uses of the word in Pliny cf. vi. 4, 2, regionisque abundantiam inoffensa transmitteres (passed through); viii. 8, 3, quas (naves) transmittit (allows to pass); viii. 11, 2, transmissumque discrimen convalescendo metiri (i.e. the danger she has passed through); viii. 20, 1, transmittere mare (to cross the sea).

8. de summa valetudinis, "about the issue of his illness." Summa = the general estimate, which might be favourable or unfavourable.

maneretque, "remain in life."

9. dandum enim, i.e. hoc esse: "for he owed this, he said." = concedendum, tribuendum. Cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 2, 94, das aliquid famae.

10. impetu quodam etc., "to rush with a dash and fiery impulse to death" (as one would to battle).

11. promissis adnuat, "confirm the hopes they hold out."

adsidenti, "as I sit by his bed." Common in this sense.

12. destinem: cf. i. 8, 1, note.

confusioni meae, "my troubled mind." confusio and confusus late Latin for mental disturbance (perturbatio animi). Livy, however, i. 7, has confusus atque incertus animi; xxxv. 15, maerore recenti confusa; xxxv. 35, animum confusum tantae cogitatione rei; vi. 34, confusam eam ex recenti morsu animi. Cf. Pliny iii. 10, 2, veritus ne vos festis diebus confunderem; v. 5, 1, nuntius me gravi dolore confundit; Pan. 86, 3, quam ego audio confusionem tuam fuisse; Juven. iii. 1, digressu veteris confusus amici. So also Ovid, Sueton., Quint., Tacit., etc.

XXIII.

To Q. Pompeius Falco are addressed iv. 27, vii. 22, ix. 15. He was son-in-law of Q. Sosius Senecio. For further details see Mommsen in Keil, p. 422.

inanem umbram etc. From the time that Augustus became invested with the tribunicia potestas, the office of tribune became a mere name compared with what it had been in the later years of the Republic, the tribunicia potestas of the emperor completely overshadowing the annual holders of the tribunate. The passages from Tacit. Ann. i, 77, simulacra libertatis, with reference to the tribunate, and also Ann. xiii. 28, manebat nihilominus quaedam imago reipublicae, quoted by Gierig, are not parallels to inanem umbram.

sacrosanctam. The persons of the tribunes were inviolable. in ordinem cogi, "to be degraded." Cogere in ordinem is said of any one who resists a magistrate or forbids him to use his authority, i.e. seeks to reduce him to the level of an ordinary citizen. Cf. Livy iii. 51, decemviri querentes se in ordinem cogi; vi. 38, rogationi qua se in ordinem cogi videbat; xxv. 3, Fulvius consul tribunis, nonne videtis, inquit, vos in ordinem coactos esse. The phrase is most frequently used of the tribunate. Cf. last passage quoted, and also Livy xliii. 16. Originally a military expression; cf. ii. 6, 5, note.

ita ne a se quidem, "much less by the holder of the office himself."

2. erraverim fortasse: Notice this use of the potential subjunctive in a past sense: it generally has a present sense. Kraut., p. 39.

me esse aliquid, "that I was somebody" = εἶναι τι. Cf. Juven. i. 74—

aude aliquid brevibus Gyaris et carcere dignum si vis esse aliquid.

deforme, "unseemly."

cui adsurgere etc.: cf. Cic. de Senect. xviii., haec enim ipsa sunt honorabilia, decedi, adsurgere.

qui iubere posset tacere quemcumque. The tribunes had carried their power of veto even the length of silencing a consul, e.g. Metellus bade Cicero be silent. Cf. Dion Cassius xxxvii. 38.

clepsydra: see Dict. of Antiq. and note on i. 20, 10.

interfari, "to interrupt;" interpellare was the usual word. Livy, however, uses interfari several times (iii. 47; vii. 36; xxxii. 34). Cf. also Verg. Aen. i. 386, medio sic interfata dolore est.

4. scholasticis dominis, "for your scholars indeed when they become landowners." Scholasticus applied specially to a rhetorician who takes no part in real pleading: cf. ii. 3, 5. For porro cf. i. 8, 10.

reptare, "saunter along the bounds of their estate." Cf. Hor. Epis. i. 4, 4, tacitum silvas inter reptare salubres.

unamque semitam terere, "tread the same beaten track."

viteculas, arbusculas. The diminutives are in keeping with the idea of humble content.

5. dotibus, "qualities": cf. ii. 17, 29.

tam salubriter, "at such a reasonable price." Cf. vi. 30, 3, ut quam saluberrime reficiantur; Martial x. 104, 14, secessus pretio paret salubri=ὕγιει μισθῶ Saluber in this sense is late Latin. The word first meant "wholesome." By a natural extension it came to mean "profitable," "advantageous." Hence pretium salubre means a price advantageous to the buyer, i.e. a low or moderate price.

BOOK II.

I.

About Voconius Romanus see i. 5, introduction. Verginius Rufus, the subject of this letter, was a native of a municipium near Comum. He was in command of the legions of upper Germany when Julius Vindex, proprætor of Gaul, a scion of a royal house in Aquitania, revolted from Nero in favour of Galba. Verginius met Vindex in a sanguinary battle at Vesontio (Besançon) and defeated him, Vindex afterwards committing suicide. After the battle the legionaries offered to raise Verginius to the imperial purple, but he refused. After Galba's accession the German legionaries still wanted to make Verginius emperor, but he again refused. Galba, who could not afford to despise such a powerful rival, summoned Verginius to Rome under friendly pretexts, appointing Hordeonius Flaccus to his command. After the death of Otho at Bedriacum the soldiers again offered the empire to Verginius, but he again refused, and thereby so infuriated the legionaries that he had to escape by the back of his tent from their violence. He lived on into the reign of Nerva, by whom he was made consul for the third time. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 429. Juvenal mentions him viii. 221—

quid enim Verginius armis debut ulcisci magis, aut cum Vindice Galba?

perinde felicis, “and not less fortunate,” i.e. in having escaped the vengeance of the Caesars, and also for the other reasons mentioned in section 2. For perinde cf. i. 8, 12, note.

2. gloriae suae supervixit, “he lived to enjoy his renown,” not “he survived his renown.”

triginta annis, i.e. from the defeat of Vindex. The ablative of “time throughout which” is common in post-Augustan writers, rare before that time. Roby, § 1089. I prefer, however, in the present instance to make annis an ablative of measure.

carmina ... historias. What the poems were we cannot tell. From ix. 19, 5, we may conjecture that the historiae were those of M. Cluvius Rufus, frequently mentioned with praise by Tacitus. Mommsen (Hermes iv. 318-325) considers his histories the chief source of Plutarch’s lives of Galba and Otho, also of the first two books of Tacitus’ Histories and Suetonius’ Galba, Otho, and Vitellius.

summum fastigium privati hominis, “the highest position open to a subject.” Privatus under the Emperors was applied, not, as under the Republic, to those who held no office of state, but to all except the emperor. For fastigium cf. i. 7, 1. Fastigium implere, strictly speaking, contains a mixture of metaphors. For a similar mixture cf. viii. 13, 1, vides quem sequi, cuius debeas implere vestigia. But probably implere had become so familiar in phrases like implere munia = exsolvere, perficere, that the original sense was lost. The same may be said of fastigium.

3. Caesares, Nero, Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Domitian.

optimum etc., i.e. Nerva, not Trajan, as Catan. says. According to Mommsen, Verginius met with the accident at the beginning of the year 97, and lingered on (see sec. 4) till probably about the close of the same year, Nerva still being emperor. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 429; Hermes iii. 38. Trajan did receive the title of optimus, as we learn from Paneg. ii. 7, iam quid tam civile, tam senatorium, quam illud additum a nobis optimi cognomen? But the succeeding words (quod peculiare huius et proprium adrogantia priorum principum fecit) show that the title was applied to other emperors. In Paneg. 89. 1, Nerva is called optimus.

4. in altissima tranquillitate, "in profound retirement." I take tranquillitas, with Gierig, as = otium, and would make it refer to the whole time between Verginius' second consulship and his third. This meaning of tranquillitas is sufficiently supported by iii. 7, 9, in hac tranquillitate annum quintum et septuagesimum excessit (called otium in sec. 3); iv. 23, 4, quando secessus mei non desidia nomen sed tranquillitatis accipient; vii. 25, 2, paratisque honoribus tranquillissimum otium praetulit. Altus is a frequent epithet of otium: cf. i. 3. 3, note. Corte makes tranquillitas refer only to the peaceful security Verginius enjoyed under Nerva.

aditus mortis, "death came to him in a somewhat severe and tedious form."

hic ipse, "this very circumstance."

5. vocem praepararet, "was practising his voice," not, as Döring says, "rehearsing his speech," as the words liber, quem forte acceperat grandiores show. His speech to the emperor could not have taken up a large volume. For the phrase cf. Quint. x. 7, 2, dum illa verba fabricentur et memoriae insidant et vox ac latus praeparatur; ibid. ix. 23, 4, nec praeparare ab imis sonis vocem ad summos.

acturus in consulatu principi gratias, a usual custom with the consuls, under the Empire, on the day of their entering on office.

dum sequitur colligitque, "in darting after it and trying to recover it." The force of colligit is plain, if we remember that the liber was a manuscript.

per leve etc., "on the smooth and slippery floor." The pavimentum was of marble or mosaic. See Becker's Gallus ii. 206. Per, not = propter, as Gierig takes it, but as in Hor. Sat. ii. 7, 86, totus teres atque rotundus, | externi ne quid valeat sacerdotes ... nominare. The priests referred to are the augurs. In Republican times the election to this priesthood was by cooptatio, but afterwards the appointment lay in the hands of the emperor. The College of Augurs seems, however, to have preserved the privilege of nominatio by which they could indicate the person whom they deemed worthy of election. Pliny, as we see here, was repeatedly nominated by Verginius, and from iv. 8, 3 we learn that he was subsequently nominated by Julius Frontinus, whom he at last succeeded, for several consecutive years before he obtained the priesthood.

9. quinqueviros minuendis publicis sumptibus. These officers were appointed in pursuance of Nerva's policy of retrenchment necessitated by Domitian's extravagance. They are mentioned also in Paneg. 62. 2, nempe enim hi sunt quos senatus, cum publicis sumptibus minuendis optimum quemque praeficeret, elegit, et quidem primos. For the construction min. pub. sump. cf. Roby § 1156.

huius aetatis, "young as I am."

per quem excusaretur, "as his substitute." tibi mandarem, "I would entrust this office to you." Some would understand filium after mandarem, but that can hardly be the sense.

10. ex causis. Ex is frequently used by Pliny instead of the classical de, which Kraut says occurs, so far as he has observed, only four times.

si fas est aut flere. These words suggest Naevius' epitaph, mortales immortales flere si foret fas etc., just as the next section, vivit enim etc., suggests that of Ennius, nemo me lacrumis decoret neque funera fletu | faxit, cur? volito vivu' per ora virum. Probably Pliny had both in his mind.

11. postquam ab oculis recessit: cf. i. 16, 8, note.

12. vanis imaginibus etc., "in dreams, idle it may be, but ever vivid." Verg. Aen. i. 407, falsis ludis imaginibus.

II.

To Valerius Paulinus are written also iv. 16, v. 19, ix. 3. 37. He was a native of Forum Julii (Fréjus) in Gallia Narbonensis, of which province he was procurator in the reign of Vitellius. He joined Vespasian, and also attached the neighbouring states to the Flavian cause, and defeated and captured Fabius Valens, a defeat which decided the success of Vespasian. Cf. Tacit. Hist. iii. 42, 43, 44. From Pliny ix. 37 we learn that he obtained the consulship under Trajan. In v. 19 we find Pliny sending his sick freedman Zosimus for his health to Paulinus' estates at Forum Julii. In x. 104 (105) Pliny writes that Paulinus has bequeathed to him the ius Latinorum suorum (the patronage of his freedmen). See Mommsen in Keil, p. 428.

nec liquet an debeam, "I am not sure that I ought to be." Simply dubitative. So below, nescio an iusta = "whether just or not I do not know." In a præ-Augustan writer these phrases would have meant "I am not sure whether I ought not to be," "I do not know whether it is not just," i.e. I am inclined to think it is just. The usage is frequent in Pliny and Quintilian. The later writers indeed waver between the dubitative and affirmative meaning of nescio an. Cf. Quint. x. 1, 65; x. 6, 1; x. 7, 29; Pliny ii. 12, 1; x. 118. See Roby § 2256. It may here be noted that haud and haud scio an do not occur in Pliny.

tamquam. With tamquam and velut the si is sometimes omitted. Roby § 1580.

3. illud enim etc., "for heaven forbid that I should hear the excuse, I have been rather unwell." After ut supply audiam from the preceding auditurus.

ad villam = in villa. Cf. Cic. pro Rosc. 15. 44, ut aleretur ad villam = in villa. Probably an archaic expression introduced into colloquial speech. So Plautus, ad forum, ad portum. See Kraut 19.

III.

To Nepos are also addressed iii. 16 (giving some stories about the Elder Arria, wife of Caecina Paetus); iv. 26 (in answer to a request of Nepos that Pliny should have his works revised. Pliny there calls him vir gravissimus, doctissimus, disertissimus, super haec occupatissimus, maximae provinciae praefuturus); vi. 19 (about the rise in the price of land near Rome). Mommsen gives the full name as P. Metilius Sabinus Nepos. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 418.

Isaeum. The life of the Assyrian rhetorician is given by Philostratus, Vit. Soph. i. 20. Cf. Juven. iii. 47, sermo promptus et Isaeo torrentior.

facultas, cf. i. 20, 18, note.

praefationes, "His prefatory remarks." Not to be confounded with the prooemium, which is referred to in sect. 3. The technical divisions of a speech were (1) prooemium or exordium; (2) narratio; (3) confirmatio or probatio (statement of arguments for the case and refutation of opponent's arguments); (4) peroratio. Cf. i. 13, 2, note, where praefatio is used of the preliminary remarks of a public reciter. Cf. also iv. 11, 2, 14 for the praefationes of Valerius Licinianus, qui rhetor de oratore fiebat.

tersae, "faultless." Cf. Quint. xii. 10, 50, tersum ac limatum et ad legem ac regulam compositum; ibid., x. 1, 93, cuius [elegiae] mihi tersus atque elegans maxime videtur auctor Tibullus; also sect. 94, multum est tersior ac purus magis Horatius.

graciles, "neat" or "terse." Cf. Quintil. xii. 10, 24, where Lysiaca gracilitas is contrasted with the ampler style of Pericles and the other Attics.

graves interdum et erectae, "stately and animated"; referring to the style, not to the matter, as Gesner says, since the praefatio would only contain the ordinary introductory commonplaces, and no weighty argument. Cf. Quint. xi. 1, 31, where the plenum et erectum et audax et praecultum genus is opposed to the pressum et mite et limatum genus.

2. poscit controversias plures, "he asks for several subjects for discussion." This differs from the account of Philostratus:—τὰς δὲ μελέτας οὐκ αὐτοσχεδίου ἐποιεῖτο, ἀλλ' ἐπεσκεμμένας τὸν ἐξ ἔω ἐς μεσημβρίαν καιρόν. Perhaps I had better quote here the substance of Philostratus' criticism:—ἰδέαν δ' ἐπήσκησε λόγων οὐτ' ἐπιβεβλημμένην (exaggerated) οὐτ' αὖον, ἀλλ' ἀπέριττον, καὶ κατὰ φύσιν, καὶ ἀποχρῶσαν τοῖς πράγμασιν. ... βραχέως ἐρμηνεύειν καὶ πᾶσαν τὴν ὑπόθεσιν συνελεῖν ἐς βραχὺ Ἰσαίου εὕρημα. Controversiae were imaginary cases proposed for discussion, each party taking a side. Such mental gymnastics were common. Cf. Cic. de Amicit. v, doctorum est ista consuetudo, eaque Graecorum ut iis ponatur de quo disputent, quamvis subito. Frequent mention is made of controversiae in Quintilian and Seneca. Suetonius de Clar. Rhet. i. gives colligit Pliny refers to the peroratio. If so, cf. the phrase colligere rationes. But Messrs. Dill and Fausset agree in condemning this view.

ornat. For ornatus, with examples, see Quint. viii. 3, 61, seq. "his word-painting is noble."

quid maxime, dubites, "so that you will doubt where he most excels."

ἐνθυμήματα. The word ἐνθυμ. is not used here in its logical sense, viz. a syllogism from probable premisses (συλλογισμὸς ἐξ εἰκότων ἢ σημείων), or with later logicians, a syllogism with one premiss suppressed, but in the sense of rhetorical argument or conclusion drawn from contraries. Examples are:—eam quam nihil accusas, damnas. id quod scis prodest nihil; id quod nescis, obest. Cf. Cic. Topica, ch. 13; Quint. viii. 5, 9, seqq. The mss. readings vary in this passage and consequently the editors. Gierig has crebra ἐνθυμήματα καὶ νοήματα. Others omit ἐνθυμήματα, retaining νοήματα, on the ground that ἐνθυμήματα is identical with syllogismi circumscripti. G. H. Schaefer, on the other hand, considers the words crebri syllogismi circumscripti et effecti as a gloss. Quint. viii. 5, 12, thus defines νόημα, hoc nomine donarunt ea quae non dicunt, sed intellegi volunt, i.e. where you say one thing but imply another. For an example cf. Quint. loc. cit. If νοήματα be read, we must take it in this technical sense, and not (as some, identifying it with sententiae in Quint. xii. 10, 48) in the sense of "short striking reflections."

circumscripti et effecti "concise, yet finished." For the adversative use of et cf. Paneg. 46. nemo de severitate tua queritur, et liberum est queri. 76. unus censebat quod sequerentur omnes et omnes inprobarent. Tacit. uses both et and que in this sense. Agric. 9, severus et saepius misericors. Ann. ii. 70, moderabaturque cursui. Cf. also Cic. Sest. § 7, optimi et calamitosissimi. Effectus in the sense of perfectus or absolutus post-classical.

repetit altius. Cf. i. 8, 8 note, Cic. Cluent. § 58, alte petito prooemio (Fausset's note). This statement might, as Gierig and Döring suggest, only confirm the statement of Philostratus that Isaeus studied his speeches beforehand in private; but such instances of remarkable memory are not rare.

4. ad tantam ἔξιν “such readiness.” Cf. Quint. x. 1, 1, where he defines ἔξις as firma facilitas = “a well established readiness.” Quint. proceeds to say that it is a usual subject of discussion whether this ἔξις is acquired most by writing or by reading or by speaking.

5. scholasticus tantum, “only a rhetorician.” Opposed to nos qui in foro verisque litibus terimur. Cf. i. 24, 4.

terimur. Cf. vii. 3, 3, terere in hac turba = “knock about in this crowd of ours”; viii. 12, 2, si litibus tererer = “if I were harassed by lawsuits”; vii. 5, 2, unum tempus his tormentis caret, quo in foro amicorum litibus conteror.

multum malitiae addiscimus, “learn many new tricks.” Malitia here used in its better sense. For the ill meaning of the word, cf. Cic. Nat. Deor. III. 30, where it is defined as versuta et fallax nocendi ratio.

6. et ficta causa, res inermis, “and the imaginary case, a skirmish without weapons.” I differ from Keil in putting a comma after causa. Catanaeus reads ut ficta causa ita res inermis, which gives much the same meaning as above.

felix, “enjoyable.”

7. saxeus ferreusque es. Aesch. Prom. Vinct. 250, σιδηρόφρων τε καὶ πέτρας εἰργασμένος; Ovid, Met. v. 509, mater ad auditas stupuit, ceu saxea, voces; Verg. Aen. iv. 366, duris genuit te cautibus horrens | Caucasus; Cic. ad Fam. xv. 21, ferreus essem si te non amarem; Juven. i. 30, nam quis iniquae tam patiens urbis, tam ferreus (in the sense of patient); also in the same sense vii. 150, declamare doces? O ferrea pectora Vetti.

8. ab ultimo terrarum orbe. Gades (Cadiz) was to the ancients the western limit of the world. Cf. Juven. x. 1, omnibus in terris quae sunt a Gadibus usque || Auroram et Gangen.

ut viderat. Note the use of indicative instead of subjunctive in a relative clause in oratio obliqua. The usage is common in Sallust, Livy, and Tacitus. Roby, § 1798.

ἀφιλόκαλον, inlitteratum, “boorish and unscholarly.”

non putare tanti cognitionem, “not to think such a study worth the trouble.” Barthius is wrong in supposing a genitive such as virī or eius to have dropped out after cognitio. The meaning is plain without it, and besides cognitio is always used of the study or investigation of a subject, not of a person. It means here the study of such a science as Isæus professes.

9. viva vox. Catan quotes Quint. ii. 2, 8, licet enim satis exemplorum ad imitandum ex lectione suppeditet, tamen viva illa, ut dicitur, vox alit plenius. Cf. also Hor. Art. Poet. 317, respicere exemplar vitae morumque iubebo doctum imitatore et vivas hinc ducere voces;

Gellius Noct. Att. xiv. 2, quoniam vocis, ut dicitur, vivae penuria erat.

nam licet acriora, "for however lively what you read may be." Cf. i. 2, 5.

habitus, "the whole bearing of a speaker."

adfigit, "impresses."

10. Rhodiis. Aeschines had gone into exile to Rhodes. orationem, i.e. the de Corona. This story is told by Quint. xi. 3, 7; Cic. de Orat. iii. 56; Valer. Max. viii. 10, and others. Pliny also alludes to it again in iv. 5, 1, where he adds, as Cic. and Val. Max. do, that Aeschines first read his own speech in Ctesiphontem.

θηρίου. Such epithets are common in the speeches of Demosthenes and Aeschines. Some editions add, after θηρίου, τὰ αὐτοῦ ῥήματα βοῶντος. The addition is a gloss, and gains no support from Hieron. (ad Paulin Ep. 53, vol. i., p. 272, ed. Vallars) who says, quid si ipsam audissetis bestiam sua verba resonantem? Hieron. most probably quoted from memory. Quint., Cic., and Valer. Max. all have simply ipsum audissetis.

fatebatur, i.e. Aeschines.

11. vel ideo tantum, etc. "if only to be able to say that you have heard him."

III.

We know nothing of Calvina, except that she was a connection by marriage of Pliny's (cf. § 2, ad finitatis officio), probably a relative of one of his wives.

adires hereditatem, "enter on an inheritance." When an heir accepted a bequest he was said cernere hereditatem, when he entered on the inheritance adire hereditatem.

ferre or referre alicui, i.e. to place it to the credit of the payer. When he entered a sum as paid by himself to another person he was said expensum ferre or referre, i.e. to debit the person with the amount. For fieri the Florentine MS. reads ferri.

frugalitate suppletur. Cf. vi. 8, 5, nullus illi nisi ex frugalitate reditus.

4. in te vero ratio constabit, "in your case, however, my liberality will be easily justified." For ratio constabit cf. i. 5, 16, note; also i. 9, 1.

V.

To Lupercus is also written ix. 26 on oratorical style. He may be the same Lupercus to whom Martial, Ep. i. 117, writes, but it is uncertain. If he be the same he, according to Martial, preferred to borrow books rather than to buy them.

actionem. This was some speech delivered at Rome on behalf of the people of Comum, not, as some suppose, the speech delivered to the Comenses to which Pliny refers in i. 8. That speech is called sermo, this actio, which shows that the latter was probably a legal speech. Besides, the whole tone of the present letter shows that Pliny is referring to another speech than that spoken of in i. 8.

exhibui. Cf. i. 2, 1, note.

2. intentionem scribentis accommodes. "Bestow on them the same care as their writer has done." The words might mean "the same attention as if you had written them yourself." But the succeeding words support the first translation. For intentio, cf. i. 3, 2, note. For accommodo, in this sense, the simple verb commodo is more usual.

inter manus habui. Cf. verg. Aen. xi. 311, ante oculos interque manus sunt omnia vestras.

In manibus habere, in manibus esse are the usual classical constructions. Cf. Cic. ad Att. xiii. 47, omnia quae in manibus habebam, abieci; Cic. Cat. Maj. xi. 38, septimus mihi Originum liber est in manibus.

3. existimationi, "the judgment."

fides, "my honesty towards my client." Cf. i. 20, 2, note on praevericatio; also ii. 9, 4.

pietas, "my patriotism."

ornare patriam etc., "to celebrate and extol my native country."

defensioni eius servimus, "use my efforts for its defence." Some read the stronger word deservimus.

4. ratio. Cf. i. 20, 24.

delicias. Cf. i. 20, 23.

ex ipsa mediocritate libri, "purely from the moderate compass of the work." Pliny is afraid of possibly being carried away by his subject and his love of rhetoric into high-flown digressions and embellishments.

5. austeritatem, "strictness." Austeritas and austerus are usual epithets of wines which are dry and bind the tongue. For examples see the dictionaries.

ut in plerisque frontem remittas, "to look indulgently on very many passages." Frontem remittere is to smooth or relax the brow. For other phrases to the same effect cf. Ter. Adolph. v. 3, 53, expurge frontem; Plaut. Casina, ii. 4, 3, porrectiore fronte; Hor. Od. iii. 29, 16,

sollicitam explicuere frontem;*

Mart. Epig. xiv. 183, also has solvere. The opposite is frontem contrahere (cf. Cic. Pro. Cluent. ch. 26, contrahit frontem; also Pliny, Ep. iii. 6, 7, gaudes ... sed contrahas frontem) adducere, attrahere.

sunt quaedam danda, "some concessions must be made." Cf. i. 22, 9, note.

non historice tantum: cf. vii. 9, 8. Saepe in orationes quoque non historica modo sed prope poetica descriptionum necessitas incidit, Quint x. 1, 31.

Mr. Fausset suggests that historice may not be "historically," but may rather answer to the original idea of ιστορία, narrative based on personal travel and inquiry. He is, however, doubtful.

6. laetius fecisse, "been too exuberant." Cf. laetas segetes, Verg. Georg. i. 1. Laetius is opposed to severitas and tristitiam. The other readings are lautius fecisse, "to have been too florid"; latius fecisse, "to have taken too wide a range."

dixerim. For the perfect subjunctive in modest assertions, see Roby, § 1540.

exorare, "mollify."

teneremus, "catch."

7. naturam, "taste"

confidere ut ... commendet. The usual construction with confidere is the accusative with the infinitive, and this construction occurs at least twelve times in Pliny's letters, the construction ut occurring nowhere but here. We find, however, in Cic. ad Quint. Frat. i. 2, ad fin. confido animo ut in hac republica ne casum quidem ullum pertimescam. Gesner suggests that fore or futurum has been carelessly omitted by a copyist before ut, or that confidere ut has been used after the analogy of veremur ne for the sake of uniformity. The editions of Pompon. Laetus, Beroaldus, and Catanaeus have conficere.

universitatem: cf. i. 8, 3, note.

8. in ratione conviviorum, "to take the case of a feast."
stomachus, "palate."

9. non tamquam, etc. For the omission of si, see Roby, § 1580.

istis, "to what I send you with this letter."

10. in praesentia: cf. i. 7, 3. note.

11. tu quidem. Note the pleonastic use of tu to carry the quidem. Madv. 489 b.

12. principia, "specimens."

VI.

Junius Avitus is probably the same person whose premature death Pliny laments in viii. 23. He had put on his laticlave in Pliny's house, and used Pliny as his guide, philosopher, and friend (formator morum et quasi magister). He was

VII.

Minicius Macrinus is the same person to whom Persius addresses his second satire. He was a native of Brixia (cf. i. 14, 5, note). To him are addressed iii. 4 (about Pliny's appearing for the Baetici against Classicus), vii. 6 (where Pliny expresses satisfaction with himself for his discreet reticence in the case of his client Varenus, accused by the Bithynians), vii. 10 (about the same case), viii. 17 (about an overflow of the Tiber), ix. 4 (enclosing a speech for revision). In viii. 5, Pliny speaks in eulogistic terms of Macrinus' wife, whom he has just lost.

Vestricius Spurinna was, as it seems, Otho's legatus legionis against the Vitellians (Tacit. Hist. ii. 11, 18, 23, 36; Plut. Otho 5, 6, 7). He was consul two or three times. He is mentioned by Pliny in i. 5, 8; cf. also Mommsen in Keil, p. 429. His active, regular, and studious habits are fully described in iii. 1. Besides being a soldier, he was, as Pliny there says, no mean lyric poet, writing in Greek as well as Latin. The extant poems ascribed to him are supposed to be spurious. Cf. Wernsdorf, Poet. Min. iii. 351, seq.

1. herē, the usual form in Quintilian's time. Cf. Quint. i. 7, 22, 'here' nunc e littera terminamus: at veterum comitorum adhuc libris invenio: heri ad me venit, quod idem in epistulis Augusti, quas sua manu scripsit aut emendavit, deprenditur; Roby, § 524 (3).

triumphalis statua. The Emperor, being commander-in-chief, was alone entitled to a triumph; but bestowed on his generals instead those various decorations and honours known as triumphalia ornamenta.

nisi in spectaculis: cf. Juv. Sat. vi. 250, florali tuba; x. 213, quid refert magni sedeat qua parte theatri, qui vix cornicines exaudiet atque tubarum concentus?

Verg. Aen. v. 113, et tuba commissos medio canit aggere ludos.

sudore et sanguine. For the phrase cf. Ennius, quoted in Cic. de Off. i. 18, 61, Salmáci da spolia sine sudore et sanguine.

2. Bructerum. The Bructeri were a German tribe dwelling in the region of the sources of the Ems and the Lippe.

induxit, "restored."

3. fomento. Cf. Hor. Epod. xi. 17, fomenta vulnus nil malum levantia.

4. proferri, "to be prolonged." Cf. iii. 7, 14, sed tanto magis hoc quicquid est temporis futilis et caduci, si non datur factis, certe studiis proferamus. So also extendere. Cf. Hor. Od. ii. 2, 5, vivet extento Proculeius aere.

auctoritas etiam. For etiam cf. i. 22, 7, note; Cic. de Senect. xvii. 60, apex est senectutis auctoritas. All the virtues here mentioned are virtues of old age.

5. gaudia ex superstitibus, "the joy they will have in them if they survive."

6. publice, "on public grounds."

inpatienter: cf. v. 1, ix. 22, 2. Post-Augustan.

requiro = desidero. Cf. Hor. Od. iii. 24, 31, virtutem incolumem odimus | sublatam ex oculis quaerimus invidi.

respicere, "to look back on it."

7. refertur, "are recalled."

VIII.

About Caninius see i. 3. note.

1. studia. Döring is nearly right when he says that the absolute use of studia in our modern sense of "studies" is confined to late Latinity. But such phrases as studiis ac litteris (Cic. ad Att. viii. 11), studia exercere (ad Fam. ix. 8), seri studiorum (Hor. Sat. i. 10, 12) show a near approach to the later usage.

altissimus iste secessus. Cf. i. 3, 3, note.

2. artissimos laqueos. Pliny harps on the same string as in i. 10, 9. See note.

numquamne. An echo of Horace's wish, Sat. ii. 6, 60 (read preceding lines), o rus! quando te adspiciam.

abrumpam. Cf. use of word in i. 12, 8, note on abrupit.

3. tot nexibus etc., "by so many ties and links is the chain of my engagements made longer and longer every day." Nexus in this simple sense occurs only in post-Augustan prose. We are here reminded of Goldsmith's Traveller, "And drags at each remove a lengthening chain." Notice the very rare but original sense of agmen—a drawing out, or something drawn out.

VIII.

To Domitius Apollinaris Pliny writes, v. 6, describing his Tuscan villa. In ix. 13, 13 he is spoken of as Consul designatus.

To Sextus Erucius Clarus (or it may be to his father, Erucius Clarus) is addressed i. 16. For further details see Mommsen in Keil, p. 409.

1. anxium habet, "worries me," "keeps me anxious." Habere with adjective or passive participle as predicate denotes persistence or continuance of a state or action. Nägelsbach, Lat. Stil. § 110; Roby § 1402. Compare the use of the Greek ἔχω.

pro me altero, "for my second self." Cf. Cic. de Amicit. xxi. 80, est enim is quidem (i.e. amicus) tamquam alter idem; Aristot. Eth. ix. 4, 5, ἔστι γὰρ ὁ φίλος ἄλλος αὐτός.

et alioqui, "and besides." A favourite phrase of Pliny, and seems to be peculiar to him and the elder Pliny (Hand, Tursell. i. 238). Praeterea or ceterum would be the classical word.

2. latum clavum. The latus clavus was a broad vertical purple stripe running down the front of the toga, generally inwoven in the cloth, and distinguished the senators from the equites, who wore the angustus clavus, Sueton. Aug. 38, says that Augustus allowed the sons of senators the privilege of wearing it, thus giving them an entry into the senate and a means of becoming familiar with its business. The same privilege was also granted to the sons of equites, as in the case of Ovid and his brother (cf. Ovid, Trist. iv. 10, 28).

per ora hominum ferantur, "to be borne on the lips of men." Another echo of Ennius', volito vivus per ora virum. cf. ii. 1, 10, note; also Verg. Aen. xii. 235, vivusque per ora feretur; Georg. iii. 9, victorque virum volitare per ora, where Vergil may have had more meanings than one. See Conington's note.

lingua Romana. Earlier writers say lingua Latina. For the anxiety of the earlier Romans to make the Latin tongue coextensive with the Roman rule see Valer. Max. ii. ch. ii.

spatiis. Cf. Verg. Georg. ii. 541, sed nos immensum spatiis confecimus aequor, "a boundless breadth of plain" (Mackail).

adhuc, "any longer." The use of adhuc with reference to the future is late Latin, cf. ii. 19, 9; iii. 10, 4, haesitanti mihi, omnia quae iam composui vobis exhiberem, an adhuc aliqua differrem; iv. 13, 1, pauculis adhuc diebus commorabor.

3. enotuerunt, post-classical; enituerunt MV. Corte conjectures emicuerunt.

quandoque, "some day or other." It occurs in this sense in iii. 18, 10; iv. 13, 6; vi. 21, 2, etc., and also in Cicero and Livy.

4. adserere. Cf. iii. 5, 4, orabatque ut se ab iniuria oblivionis adsereret. For adserere with dative see i. 3, 3, note. For a somewhat similar sentiment to that expressed in this section cf. Sallust, Catil. i., quo mihi rectius videtur ingenii quam virium opibus gloriam quaerere; et quoniam vita ipsa qua fruimur brevis est, memoriam nostri quam maxime longam efficere. Nam divitiarum et formae gloria fluxa atque fragilis est.

viderint, "I leave my friends to see to it." For this use of fut.-per. indic. cf. Cic. Phil. ii. ad fin. sed de te tu videris. Roby, § 1593.

5. intentionisque. Cf. i. 3, 2, note.

dispice. Cf. i. 5, 10, note.

6. olim praesumo, "have long been anticipating." The classical word is praecipio. The noun praesumptio (= anticipation) occurs in iv. 15, 11, rerum quas adsequi cupias praesumptio. For olim cf. i. 11, 1, note.

7. imaginor. Cf. i. 14, 9.

8. tam parato, "so certain."

XI.

About Arrianus see i. 2, note. It is to be noted that most of Pliny's letters to him are on forensic business. This letter is about the famous prosecution of Marius Priscus, proconsul of Africa. Juvenal alludes to him i. 49, exsul ab octava Marius bibit et fruitur dis iratis, at tu victrix provincia ploras ;

viii. 120, cum tenues nuper Marius discinxerit Afros. Pliny refers to this prosecution in the next letter, and also in iii. 9, 3, where, speaking of the prosecution of Classicus by the Baetici, he says:—erat autem Priscus ex Baetica, ex Africa Classicus. inde dictum Baeticorum, ut plerumque dolor etiam venustos facit, non inlepidum ferebatur 'dedi malum et accepi'; vi. 29, 9, accusavi Marium Priscum, qui lege repetundarum damnatus utebatur clementia legis, cuius severitatem inmanitate criminum excesserat ; relegatus est ; x. 3 (20) 2.

1. insidet. Cf. Verg. Aen. i. 719, gremio fovet inscia Dido insideat quantus miserae deus.

personae, "the person concerned." This use of persona in the sense of "person" is post-classical. The word is used in classical Latinity as = character. Cf. Milton's famous attack on Salmasius (Defensio pro Populo Anglicano, Preface), where he declares Salmasius' description of the execution of Charles I. (parricidium in persona regis admissum) to be a multiplex barbarismus.

famosum, "memorable." The word is used by classical writers in a bad sense = infamis. Famosus is used in an active sense in such phrases as famosi libelli, famosum carmen.

2. accusantibus Afris. In iii. 9, 4, we are told that one African town only prosecuted Marius; but that the prosecution was supported by many private persons.

omissa defensione etc., "declined to defend himself before the Senate, and asked to have judges assigned to him." By doing this, Marius virtually pleaded guilty to the charge of extortion; and he hoped that if his case were referred to judges, the case would be confined to that charge, and would simply end with a litis aestimatio, or decision that he was to refund a certain sum, without any investigation of the graver charges, such as that of having received money to procure the death of innocent men.' iussi, i.e. by the Senate. Cf. iii. 4, 3, factum est Senatus consultum, ut darer provincialibus patronus.

convenire.. facere, excessisse. Döring calls attention to the awkward collocation of infinitives, the one depending on the other.

3. Fronto Catus. Tib. Catus [Cassius] Fronto also defended Julius Bassus (iv. 9, 15) and Varenus Rufus (vi. 13, 2), both accused by the Bithynians. He may be the same Fronto whom Mart. i. 55 calls clarum militiae togaeque decus. Niebuhr identifies him with the Fronto of Juv. i. 12, Frontonis platani. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 406.

omniaque actionis suae vela, etc., “and skilled as he is in moving tears, he swelled as it were with a breeze of pathos all the sails of his speech.” A clumsy and bombastic use of a common metaphor. Cf. also iv. 20, 2, in quo (opere) tu ingenii simul dolorisque velis latissime vectus es; viii. 4, 5, immitte rudentes, pande vela, ac si quando alias, toto ingenio vehere. Cicero’s use of the metaphor is frequent, but more graceful; cf. de Orat. ii. 44, ad id, unde aliquis flatus ostenditur, vela do; Tusc. iv. 4, statimne nos vela facere [mavis] an quasi e portu egredientes paululum remigare? iv. 5, quaerebam igitur, utrum panderem vela orationis statim an eam ante paululum dialecticorum remis propellerem; Juv. i. 149, utere velis, totos pande sinus.

4. lege conclusam, “was barred by law.” This need not refer to any one special law, but may at the same time include the law de repetundis. The argument seems to be, Marius has confessed to extortion, and the senate has no right to travel beyond that charge.

quantumque admisisset etc., “and that the whole guilt of the defendant should be punished.” For admisisset the full phrase is in se admisisset.

5. Iulius Ferox, apparently the same man to whom Pliny addresses vii. 13. See Mommsen in Keil, p. 414.

quibus diceretur etc., “by whom he was alleged to have been bribed to punish innocent persons.”

6. frequens, “numerously supported.”

adnotatumque...quod etc. A classical writer would here have used accus. with infin. Roby, § 1351, cf. § 1701. For the technical meaning of adnotare, see i. 8. 3, note quasi. Construe with peractae, not as Schaefer and Döring with the whole clause. "Was protected by a feeling of pity for a condemnation which one might have thought would have been final."

14. utcumque, "as soon as ever." The word in this sense occurs only here in Pliny. Horace is almost the only writer who uses this word in a temporal sense, and that only in four places in the Odes, i. 17, 10; i. 35, 23; iii. 4, 29; iv. 4, 35. Kraut, p. 32.

horis. For the ablative of duration see Roby, § 1089.

clepsydris, "water clocks." They were first introduced to Rome in B.C. 159, and were on the same principle as our hour glasses, water being used instead of sand. For the time allowed advocates see i. 20, 10, note. In this case Pliny would share these clepsydrae with Tacitus; giving him perhaps the half of the 12 originally allotted. We cannot determine how long each clepsydra lasted.

15. studium, "kind attention."

laterique, "lungs." Cf. iii. 9, 9, verebamur ne nos dies, ne vox, ne latera deficerent, which very closely resembles Cic. in Verrem, ii. ch. 21, nam me dies, vox, latera deficient, etc.

consulerem, jussive subjunctive, Roby, § 1606.

gracilitas, "my slender frame." So Trajan writes to Pliny x. 18 (29), cuperem sine querella corpusculi tui et tuorum pervenire in Bithyniam potuisses. So Cicero in his youth.

16. neque enim iam etc., "for a fresh speech could not now be begun." For scinderetur the more classical usage would have been dirimeretur, interrumperetur.

17. [C.] Salvius Liberalis [Nonius Bassus] pleaded also in Vespasian's time. Sueton. Vesp. 13, tells how he was praised by Vespasian, though, in defending a rich man, he had the boldness to say, "quid ad Caesarem si Hipparchus sestertium milies habet?" Under Domitian he was accused, and, as it seems, banished (Pliny iii. 9, 33). We find him pleading in the senate again in the Classicus prosecutions (iii. 9, 36, where he is described as vehemens et disertus). See Mommsen in Keil, p. 424.

dispositus, "careful in his arrangement." Pliny here transfers the quality from the speech to the man. Cf. Quint. iii. 3, 2, non tantum enim refert, quid et quo modo dicamus, sed etiam quo loco ; opus ergo est et dispositione ; viii. 3. 59, quod male dispositum est, id ἀνοικονβμητον vocant ; x. 7, 12, nam mihi ne dicere quidem videtur nisi qui disposite dicit.

18. locus ille, "that part of the case he had now to handle," i.e. the peroratio.

inclusit, "terminated." Only in poetry and post-Augustan prose in this sense.

abrumperet, "interrupt." Unusual in classical prose. Cf. Verg. Aen. iv. 388, his medium dictis sermonem abruptit.

in tertium diem...exierunt, "the proceedings extended into the third day." This use of exire = extendi, proferri is post-Augustan. Cf. Senec. de Brev. Vit. ch. 6, vestra vita, licet supra mille annos exeat, in artissimum contrahetur ; Ovid, Fasti v. 189, circus in hunc (i.e. mensem Maium) exit, i.e. "lasts into this month."

nocte dirimi, "should be interrupted by nightfall." Nocte, abl. of instrument ; triduo, temporal abl.

19. [C. Iulius] Cornutus Tertullus. A warm friend of Pliny and his colleague in the praefectura aerarii Saturni and in the consulship. Cf. v. 14 (15), Paneg. 90, Mommsen in Keil, p. 414. To him Pliny addresses vii. 21, 31.

Veritate, "justice." Cf. Tacit. Ann. i. 75, sed dum veritati consulitur, libertas corrumpebatur.

20. consules designati. They would be first called on to speak.

relegandum. Relegatio was a milder form of exile, affecting neither the citizenship nor the liberty of the person exiled.

poenae ... relinquendum, i.e. "should suffer no further punishment."

21. hac vel solutiore etc., "this more lax, or shall I call it more lenient proposal."

22. discessio ... in sententiam ire. See Dict. Antiq. In viii. 14, 19 Pliny quotes the legal formula used by the presiding magistrate in ordering a division : qui haec sentitis in hanc partem, qui alia omnia, in illam partem ite, qua sentitis.

dictaverat, "had suggested." An extension of the original meaning of dicto, somewhat like our extension of the meaning of "dictate."

alioqui, "in the main." For the fickle disposition of Regulus cf. i. 5.

plurimum audeat etc., “very foolhardy, but a great coward.”

23. amplissimae, “most important.” Cf. sect. 1, rei magnitudine.

λειτούργιον, “another bit of public business.” The word is a diminutive, but we need not press the diminutive sense.

permixtus causae, “implicated in the case.” I cannot find any parallel for this use of permixtus. Admisceo occurs in Cic. ad Quint. Frat. iii. 1, 3, Trebatium vero meum, quod isto admisceas nihil est; Ter. Hauton, iv. 5, 35, ita tu istaec tua misceto, ne me admisceas.

sermone. Cf. i. 8, 2, note.

Leptitanorum. There were two towns, Leptis Major, a little to the west of the Greater Syrtis, and Leptis Minor, further west, near Hadrumetum. The town referred to here is probably the former. About Leptis see Mommsen's Provinces of the Roman Empire, ii. pp. 316, 326, seq.

stipulatusque etc., “to have bargained to receive from Marcianus 50,000 denarii (more than £1,600).” Firminus was the agent for Marius in this transaction with Marcianus, and had on behalf of Marius bargained to receive this money from Marcianus, probably in return for the punishment or death of persons obnoxious to the latter. Stipulatio was the formal demand for a promise in verbal contracts, the answer or promise being called restipulatio.

sestertia decem milia. More than £80,000, an enormous sum if this reading be correct. If we read sestertium the sum would be rather more than £80.

nomine unguentarii, “under the head of perfume money.” Titulus and nomen are here synonymous. This was one of the many methods of extorting money from the provincials. For words of analogous formation see dictionary under camelarium, cerarium, clavarium, honorarium, salarium, vasarium, vestiarium, and compare our “pin-money.” The head would be foedissimus for a soldier.

compti et pumicati, “with his well trimmed hair and his smoothly polished skin.” Marks of effeminacy. Barbers and

alioqui, "on the whole."

3. exectum et exemptum etc., "for one to be cut off and debarred from the prizes of the senatorship, and yet not to be freed from all its toil and trouble." Exectum a surgical metaphor.

in hac altissima specula, "in this high eminence."

conspiciendum se monstrandumque, "to expose himself to the gaze and pointing finger of all." Cf. Hor. Od. iv. 3, 22, monstror digito praetereuntium; Pers. i. 28, at pulchrum digito monstrari, et dicier, hic est.

4. publice, "from a public point of view."

5. hoc. The motion of Acutius Nerva.

numerantur enim etc. Cf. Livy, xxi. 3, ad fin. sed, ut plerumque fit, maior pars meliorem vicit. For an opposite statement cf. Cic. de Off. ii. 22, non enim numero haec iudicantur, sed pondere.

nihil est tam inaequale etc. So in ix. 5, 3, nihil est ipsa aequalitate inaequalius.

6. par omnium ius est, "all are equal in the right to vote."

7. litteris, quales istinc etc., "with the fullest letter that can be sent in return from where you are."

XIII.

To L. Neratius Priscus are written vi. 8 (?) and vii. 8 (in the interest of mutual friends); also vii. 19, about the illness of Fannia, wife of Helvidius Priscus. He was legatus pro praetore of Pannonia in A.D. 98. For more details about him see Mommsen in Keil, p. 420.

2. regis exercitum. He was, if we take Mommsen's chronology, legatus pro praetore of Pannonia at this time.

beneficiorum larga materia, "a wide field for your favours."
tuos, emphatic, "to advance your own friends."

3. convertere, reflexive. Roby, § 1417.

Voconius Romanus. See i. 5, note.

4. in equestri gradu clarus. Cf. i. 14, 5, note; Hor. Odes, iii. 16, 20, Maecenas equitum decus.

pater alius, "a second father." Alter is the usual word.

e primis, "belongs to one of the leading families." I do not agree with Gierig and others who make primis refer to character, not rank, though it may include both. The context shows that Pliny is talking here more of social position. Gierig's reference to iii. 2, 2, Altinatium princeps, makes rather for my view, for there Pliny explains that he is not using the phrase in the ordinary sense of social superiority.

citerioris Hispaniae, i.e. Tarraconensis, which extended from Gallaecia in the north-west right across the north of Spain and down the east side below New Carthage. It comprised half the area of the peninsula. See Mommsen, Provinces of the Roman Empire, i. 63-77.

scis quod iudicium etc., "you know how sound and how weighty the opinion of that province is." Pliny may be thinking of his tutor Quintilian, born at Calagurris on the Ebro, and of Martial, born at Bilbilis, on a branch of the same river, but I should rather refer iudicium prov. to the succeeding words flamen proxime fuit. See next note.

5. ipse flamen. Of Hispania citerior. (Mommsen in Keil, p. 430.) Mommsen would thus arrange and punctuate the above passage:—pater ei in equestri gradu clarus: clarior ritricus ... mater e primis. ipse citerioris Hispaniae (scis quod iudicium provinciae, quanta sit gravitas) flamen proxime fuit. His grounds are that the absolute use of flamen is impossible, and that the iudicium provinciae could not be displayed in the case of Voconius' mother, but of himself, the flamens being created in conventu provinciae suffragiis legatorum. This arrangement certainly makes the passage more intelligible.

studeremus. This absolute use of studere, "study," is late Latin. Cf. ii. 8, 1, note.

6. seria, iocos. The phrase had in Cicero's time become proverbial. Cf. de Fin. ii. 26, quicum ioca, seria, ut dicitur. The masculine form iocos does not appear to have been used till after Cicero's time.

7. facile, "ready." So Quint. x. 1, 128, says of Seneca, ingenium facile et copiosum.

Musas ipsas Latine loqui. So Quint. x. i. 99, licet Varro Musas, Aelii Stilonis sententia, Plautino dicat sermone locuturas fuisse, si Latine loqui vellent.

8. nec tamen vincitur, i. e. in amore, "his affection matches mine." Cf. iv. 1, 5, nam vinci in amore turpissimum est.

iuvenis statim iuveni, "when we were both quite young." The Medicean and other MSS. omit statim. If retained it will be like the Greek évθύς in the phrase évθύς παῖς ὦν.

trium liberorum ius. The privileges attached to the parentage of three children came to be occasionally given to certain persons, even though they had no children or less than the prescribed number. Thus Martial had obtained it from Domitian. Cf. Epig. ii. 91, 5, quod fortuna vetat fieri, permitte videri, natorum genitor credar ut esse trium.

Pliny himself got the ius trium liberorum from Trajan, cf. x. 2, and he also obtained it for Suetonius, cf. x. 94 (95). 95 (96).

parce. Cf. x. 95 (96), 1, where Trajan says to Pliny, quam parce haec beneficia tribuam utique haeret tibi, and goes on to say that he never exceeded a certain number in conferring the privilege.

tamquam eligeret, "as though the choice were his own." The imperfect here represents the choice as still in force.

9. beneficia tueri. Keep up, maintain one's services. Used here of the benefactor. Cf. i. 19, 4, where it refers to the recipient.

tam grate interpretetur. "Views them so gratefully that by accepting former services he earns future ones."

"A grateful mind

By owing owes not, but still pays, at once

Indebted and discharged."—Milton, Par. Lost, iv. 54.

10. cuius ... capacem, "worthy of it even to the extent of closest intimacy."

XIII.

To Maximus are addressed iii. 2; vi. 11. 34; vii. 26; viii. 19. 24; ix. 1. 23. There are a number of Maximi mentioned by Pliny, an Anicius Maximus, proconsul of Bithynia, (x. 112), a L. Norbanus Maximus, also apparently proconsul of Bithynia under Domitian, (x. 58), a Laberius Maximus, and others. To which of these this letter is addressed we cannot determine.

applaud. Note the curious use of the verb. I can find no authority for the translation 'agreement is made with an agent,' convenire being only used impersonally in this sense. Corte's reading is sequuntur auditores actoribus similes, conducti et redempti muncipes: convenitur in media basilica, ubi tam palam, etc.

basilica. The basilica Iulia. Cf. i. 18, 3, note. As the four centumviral courts met in the same place, the media basilica would be the rallying point for these hirelings.

sportulae. sportula, a diminutive of sporta (σπυρτς) a basket in which doles of food were carried off by poor clients from the houses of their patrons. Hence applied to the dole itself which sometimes, as probably in the present case, took the form of money (100 quadrantes = about one shilling). See Dict. of Antiq. sub. voc. For lively allusions to the sportula cf. Juven. i. 95-126, 128; iii. 249; x. 46; xiii. 33, the latter passage being specially to the point here.

(clamore) quanto Faesidium laudat vocalis agentem sportula.

Quint xi. 3, 131, speaks with disapprobation of pleaders, cum inter moras laudationum aut in aurem alicuius loquuntur aut cum sodalibus iocantur aut nonnunquam ad librarios suos ita respiciunt, ut sportulam dictare videantur.

5. ex iudicio etc., "they will pass from one court to another for a similar bribe."

σοφοκλεῖς. So called from their crying σοφῶς = "bravo," with probably a pun on the Greek tragedian's name. Cf. Martial i. 3, 7, audieris cum grande sophos; i. 76, 9, praeter aquas Helicon etserta lyrasque dearum nil habet et magnum, sed perinane sophos.

Other exclamations were eu, euge, belle; cf. Pers.: i. 48, sed recti finemque extremumque esse recuso euge tuum et belle.

laudiceni. People who praise for the sake of a dinner. There is no ground for supposing that there is an allusion to the town of Laodicea. Some editors take σοφοκλεῖς and laudiceni as referring to the advocates and not to the auditors, but wrongly.

6. foeditas, "this low practice."

6. nomenclatores. The nomenclator was a slave whose duty it was to tell his master the names of the various people he met abroad, say in canvassing for office, or of those who attended his morning levées. Mart. x. 30, 23, uses the archaic form of the word.

habent sane etc., “they are, forsooth, the age of those who have just assumed the toga,” i.e. the toga virilis. To make eorum refer to the youthful pleaders, and qui sumpserint = utpote qui etc., as Gesner does, is clearly wrong.

tanti constat, etc., “such is the cost of a great reputation for eloquence.”

7. corona, a ring or crowd of listeners. Cf. Cic. pro Milone i., non enim corona consessus vester cinctus est, ut solebat.

nec ulli etc., “and none applaud more heartily than these.”

8. tribunal. The tribunal evidently accommodated others as well as the magistrates; cf. Cic. Brut. 84, volo hoc oratori contingat, ut cum auditum sit eum esse dicturum, locus in subselliis occupetur, compleatur tribunal. Vitruvius v. 1, describes a tribunal in the Basilica Julia, of which he was the architect, as hemicycli schematis minore curvatura formatum. It was arched or crescent shaped.

9. Largius Licinus. In iii. 5, 17, we learn that this man wished to buy from Pliny the elder the numerous volumes of his notes for 400,000 sesterces, probably, as Gierig says, to dress himself in another’s plumage. At that time he was legatus praetorius in Hispania Tarraconensis.

hactenus tamen etc., “but he only went so far as to get an audience together by invitation, i.e. not by bribery.

10. adsectabar Domitium Afrum. Domitius Afer, the orator, was a native of Nemausus (Nîmes), and held various high offices under Tiberius, Caligula, and Nero. Quint. x. 1, 118, describes him as arte et toto genere dicendi praefendus et quem in numero veterum habere non timeas. For more about Domitius, see Quintilian passim. adsectabar, in accordance with the usual custom whereby a young Roman attached himself to some older man of distinction, and by him was initiated into the business of the law courts and of public life. Quintil. v. 7, 7, says of Domitius, adulescentulus senem colui.

ex proximo, "from a neighbouring court," one of the four courts in the Basilica Julia.

11. intermissa causa, "discontinuing the case."
artificium, i.e. the profession of an advocate.

12. quod alioqui etc., "and indeed in other ways it was going to the bad."

puget referre etc., "I am ashamed to tell of their affected delivery of their speeches, and of the unnatural applause with which they are greeted." Fracta and tener have the same meaning here. Fracta vox is an effeminate, affected voice; cf. Juv. ii. 111, fracta voce loquendi libertas; Tacit. Dial. de Orat. xxvi., neque enim oratorius iste, immo hercule ne virilis quidem cultus est, quo plerique temporum nostrorum actores ita utuntur, ut lascivia verborum et levitate sententiarum et licentia compositionis histrionales modos exprimant. quodque vix auditu fas esse debeat, laudis et gloriae et ingenii loco plerique iactant cantari saltarique commentarios suos. unde oritur illa foeda et praepostera, sed tamen frequens quibusdam exclamatio, ut oratores nostri tenere dicere, histriones diserte saltare dicuntur. Quintil. i. 10, 31, speaks of certain music as in scenis effeminata et impudicis modis fracta. Ibid. xi. 3, 23, molli teneraque voce; ix. 4, 31, (of Domitius Afer) refugit teneram delicatamque modulandi voluptatem; cf. also Tacit. An. xiv. 20; Plin. Paneg. 54. Mommsen's reading of taetris for teneris against the MSS. is unnecessary, as is also the conjecture tentis, apparently borrowed from Quintilian.

13. plausus tantum etc., "only the clapping of hands, or rather cymbals and drums alone are wanting to this sing-song oratory." Only this is required to make the scene like a demonstration of the effeminate priests of Cybele. The tympana and cymbala were peculiar to the orgies of Cybele and also of Dionysus.

not bound to pay them. See Dict. Antiq. s. v. Testamentum. Döring seems to say that if Pliny disregarded the codicilli he would take the whole of the property. But I think Pliny is speaking only of whether he should take the half of the estate willed to him, in its entirety, or pay out of it the legacies directed by the invalid codicilli.

1. ex parte...heredem, "heir to half his estate." Where the word pars is used without such qualification as tertia, quarta etc., it means one half.

2. iure deficerentur. The MSS. and old editions are divided between deficerentur and deficerent. Both constructions are common. For the passive use, cf. Epis. ii. 17, 25; x. 90 (91), Sinopenses, domine, aqua deficiuntur. Sichert's conjecture iura deficerent is also defensible in point of syntax, whether we regard iura as nominative or as accusative, though the latter construction is unusual. Cf. Verg. Georg. i. 148, cum iam glandes atque arbuta sacrae | deficerent silvae, and Conington's note.

3. delatori locus non sit. Not because of the exile of the delatores under Trajan, but because Pliny, in distributing his share of the inheritance, was exercising a strictly legal right which no informer could interfere with. The calm mention of delator here gives us an insight into these times and the position of these informers, who were regarded as a public institution. A delator would of course have received a fee for invalidating Pliny's right to deal with his inheritance, and for turning it over to the public treasury.

4. subsedit, 'has reverted to me. Cf. iv. 12, 2, cum in provinciam quaestor exisset scribamque, qui sorti obtigerat, ante legitimum salarii tempus amisisset, quod acceperat scribae daturus intellexit et statuit subsidere apud se non oportere, i.e. ought not to remain in his hands.

XVII.

Gallo. This may be the same Gallus to whom are written iv. 17 and viii. 20 (about the wonderful lake with floating islands). He may be the Gallus mentioned in i. 7, but all is conjecture.

1. Laurentinum, i. e. praedium. The other form Laurens frequently occurs.

gratiam, "the charms."

opportunitatem loci, "how convenient its site, and what a stretch of shore it commands."

2. secessit, "it is distant." He speaks of the villa as if it were a man retiring from the town.

salvo iam et composito die, "that without loss or interruption to your working day, you can go and stay there." Salvo die means "without taking any time from the dies solidus" (the time devoted to business); cf. Hor. Odes i. 1, 20, nec partem solido demere de die. Composito die means "having finished your business day"; cf. Verg. Aen. i. 374, ante diem clauso componet Vesper Olympo (lay the day to rest). If there is a tautology in this and peractis quae agenda fuerint, it is a very common one, and to me not as offensive as it is to Gierig and others.

Laurentina et Cstiensis. The Via Ostiensis ran along the left bank of the Tiber to Ostia. From thence it was continued under the name of the Via Severiana, along the coast southward through Laurentum, Antium, and Circeii, till it joined the Via Appia at Tarracina. The Via Laurentina led direct to Laurentum, but branched off from the Via Ostiensis at a short distance from Rome. The two roads exist at the present day.

iunctis, "for a carriage."

3. facies, "the prospect," "the scenery."

montibus hieme depulsa, "driven down in winter (or by the winter), grow sleek in a pasturage and temperature like those of spring." This does not refer, as Gierig says, to the springtime, when the cattle are compelled by the melting snow to leave the mountains. Pliny's Laurentinum, as we may see throughout this letter, is a winter villa, and the cattle in winter come down to enjoy a temperature which even then is vernal. Depellere is used of the herdsman; cf. Verg. Eclog. i. 21, where the word undoubtedly bears this meaning. Here we may regard either the winter or the herdsman as the agent.

For depellere in the sense of "weaning," cf. Verg. Eclog. iii. 82, depulsis haedis; vii. 15, depulsos a lacte agnos; Georg. iii. 187, depulsus ab ubere matris.

usibus capax, "large enough for every comfort." Capax usually takes the genitive.

non sumptuosa tutela, "not costly to keep in repair." Cf. iii. 19, 2, alteram (villam) tantum tueri; Paneg. 51, idem tam parcus in aedificando quam diligens in tuendo; Cic. Verr. i. 8, 130, aedem Castoris P. Iunius habuit tuendam. Sumptuosa tutela is abl. of quality. Roby, §§ 1232, 1309.

4. porticus, "cloisters." The porticus was a covered promenade supported by pillars.

in D litterae. The readings vary between D, O, and Δ. The choice lies between the two former. Of these D seems preferable, for if Pliny had meant a complete circle, he would probably have so expressed himself, without using a letter of the alphabet.

quibus parvula etc., "inclosing a small but handsome court."

festiva may, as Castell (Villas of the Ancients) says, refer to a mosaic pavement. He notes also that Pliny only uses this epithet of what he considers a masterpiece of art or nature: cf. iii. 6, 1, Corinthium signum festivum; v. 16, 1, qua puella nihil unquam festivius vidi.

egregium ... adversus etc. Some make this a new sentence, and read hae after egregium, on the ground that egregium adversus is an awkward apposition, because too many words intervene between it and porticus, and also because, without such a word as hae, the succeeding words contra medias would be too far from porticus. The reading hae is supported by the Florentine and Dresden MSS. On the other hand, it does not appear in the Medicean and Vatican. I see nothing awkward in the apposition.

specularibus, "glazed windows," made of lapis specularis (talc), a transparent stone which was first found in Hispania Citerior, and afterwards in Cyprus, Cappadocia, Sicily, and Africa. The best came from Spain and Cappadocia. It was easily split into very thin plates; cf. Pliny Nat. Hist. xxxvi. 22. It was also used in the windows of lecticae. Juv. iv. 21, quae vehitur cluso latis specularibus antro.

orientem. If Pliny is speaking of winter-time, the one window will face, speaking roughly, south-east, and the other south-west.

occidentem ... retinet, "enjoys his last lingering rays as he sets." Admittit and retinet probably, as Gierig says, contain the metaphor of a host welcoming his guest on his arrival, and seeking to delay his departure. It is interesting to compare Pliny's references to the sun. There is a poetical touch in almost all of them: i. 3, 1; ii. 17, 7, 8, 13; v. 6, 15, aestivumque solem quasi invitat in porticum; v. 16, 24, cubiculum hieme tepidissimum, quia plurimo sole perfunditur.

subiacens mare, "the sea that lies beneath." We need not, as Gierig does, give subiacens the meaning of vicinum. Cf. i. 3, 1, note.

7. huius cubiculi ... obiectu etc., "an angle is formed by these salons and the dining room." Obiectu strictly refers to the projection of the triclinium; huius also strictly refers to the smaller cubiculum as being at the extremity of one of the lines enclosing the angle.

continet et accendit, "holds and concentrates"; as if it were a concave mirror. Cf. sec. 17.

hibernaculum, etc. This corner was exposed to the sky, and the soil being, as we may judge, sandy, it formed a suitable winter exercise ground for the slaves. That Pliny did not use it as a winter resort is plain from what he afterwards says of the xystus and cryptoporticus.

et serenum etc., "and only prevent them from using the place when they take away the fair weather." All this points to the fact that the hibernaculum and gymnasium was uncovered.

8. cubiculum in hapsida curvatum, "a salon with a semi-circular bend," i.e. one of the walls formed a semi-circle, somewhat like our bay window. The windows in this wall caught the sun morning and evening. In haps. curv. cannot mean, as some take it, "with a vaulted or domed roof." Had Pliny meant this he would have expressed himself differently.

armarium. These cases or shelves are called loculamenta by Seneca, de Tranquill. 9. sub. fin. tecto tenus exstructa loculamenta. Juven. iii. 219 calls them foruli, and Martial i. 117, 15; vii. 17, 5. calls them nidi.

non legendos etc., "not merely for perusal, but for real study."

9. dormitorium membrum, what he elsewhere (v. 6, 21.) calls dormitorium cubiculum. For membrum in the sense of an apartment cf. v. 6, 17, multa in hac membra; Cic. ad Quint. Frat. iii. 1, cubicula et eiusmodi membra.

suspensus et tubulatus. This passage was apparently supported on pillars and fitted underneath with pipes which circulated the hot air (vaporem). The temperature of the dormitorium membrum could thus be regulated from the passage by a servant, without disturbing the master. For other allusions to this method of heating cf. § 23; v. 6, 25. cohaeret hypocauston, et si dies nubilus, inmisso vapore solis vicem supplet. Seneca Ep. 90. speaks of these pipes as being imbedded in the walls; impressos parietibus tubos, per quos circumfunderetur calor, qui ima simul et summa foveret aequaliter. These pipes are frequently to be seen in the walls of Roman houses. They consist of terra cotta flues, like our drainage pipes. This latter passage also supports the reading tubulatus. The reading tabulatus would mean "made of timber." The other readings subulatus and sublatus are no doubt variants suggested by tubulatus.

plerisque tam mundis. Abl. absolute. This is a constructio ad sensum; plerisque agrees with some word, such as membris or cubiculis, implied in reliqua pars.

10. politissimum, "tastefully decorated." This corresponds to the cubiculum amplum on the left side of the triclinium (Sec. 6). The epithet politissimum would seem to indicate that this salon was used for guests only, the other being perhaps, as Castell says, used by attendants, comedians, musicians, etc. For politus cf. Varro, R. R. i. 2, regie polita aedificia; ibid iii. 9, villa polita opere tectorio eleganter; Phaedr. iv. Fab. 4, 26, domum politam.

cenatio. That Pliny distinguishes between the cenatio and triclinium is evident. So, in v. 6, 21, after speaking of the triclinium he goes on to speak of the quotidiana cenatio amicorum. Probably the cenatio differed from the triclinium in being smaller, and more adapted to private and familiar use. By the descriptions we read in other authors it appears that the cenationes were sometimes as large as the triclinia, and probably these two words were used indifferently for the same room. Suetonius (Nero 31) speaks of a cenatio in the Golden Palace of Nero, constructed like a theatre, with shifting scenes to change with every course.

11. cella frigidaria. Besides the cella frigidaria, the Roman bath had a cella tepidaria and a cella caldaria. See Dict. of Antiq. Cold baths were not very popular among the Romans. They became more fashionable after Augustus had successfully tried them by the advice of his physician, Antonius Musa.

duo baptisteria ... sinuantur. "Two curved plunge baths form an outshoot." So in v. 6, 25, the Tuscan villa has a cella frigidaria, in qua baptisterium amplum et opacum.

si mare in proximo cogites, "if you consider how near the sea is." This is the reading of the Medicean, Vatican, and Dresden MSS. The other readings si nare and si innare will mean, "if you think of having a swim in the nearest place"; i.e. instead of going to a piscina outside the bath, as suggested in v. 6, 25, si natare latius aut tepidius velis, in area piscina est.

unctorium, "the anointing room," hypocauston "the sweating room." Some MSS. and editions read unctorium (unctuarium) hypocauston, without the comma, = "the heated anointing room." But we do not read of the hypocauston being used for the purpose of anointing.

propnigeon balinei. Called also praefurnium by Vitruvius, was the room or passage communicating with the mouth of the bath furnace. It may have served a similar purpose to that of the transitus adjoining the dormitorium membrum (Sect. 9.), i.e. to receive and temper the heat before it reached the sweating room.

piscina, "a swimming bath." These might be hot or cold. So Suetonius (Nero 27) speaks of Nero as refotus saepius calidis piscinis ac tempore aestivo nivatis. Cf. Pliny patitur, "hears," or "is exposed to." An artificial use of the word confined chiefly to poetry. Translate "which, when the sea is stormy, only hears its roar and thunder, and even that in subdued and dying murmurs."

14. aperto vento. An incorrect expression due, of course, to a kind of attraction by aperto caelo = loco ventis aperto.

15. vinea tenera et umbrosa. If tenera be taken as "young," umbrosa seems an unsuitable epithet, except we understand it of the trees to which the vines were trained. Gierig takes tenera to apply to the path through the vinea; but then umbrosa comes in awkwardly between vinea tenera and the succeeding words. Perhaps it is better not to take tenera in too strict a sense, but to regard it as a stock epithet of the vine, as it actually was. Cf. Mart. Ep. iv. 13, 5, nec melius teneris iunguntur vitibus ulmi. Translate "a dainty and shady alley of vines." For vinea the Aldine Ed. reads vinca = κληματῖς δαφνοειδῆς. Scheffer reads via.

nudisque etiam pedibus. Perhaps Pliny followed the example of his favourite, Vestricus Spurinna (iii. 1, 8.), and sometimes walked naked in the open air before his bath.

hortum morus et ficus. The Romans, like the Greeks, had a very limited flora, and they tried to make up for this defect by variety of arrangement in their gardens.

malignior, the opposite of benignior. A specialised use of the word = "churlish," "niggardly," from the general idea of ill-nature. Cf. Verg. Georg. ii. 179, difficiles primum terrae, collesque maligni. Aen. vi. 270, lunae sub luce maligna.

cingitur. "It is closed in behind by two day-rooms." The Medic. MS. reads vincitur, which some editors have adopted, considering cingitur inappropriate along with a tergo. In either case the meaning will be much the same.

quarum fenestris subiacet, "whose windows command a view of," cf. i. 3, 1, note.

hortus pinguis et rusticus, “a productive kitchen garden,” as distinguished from the other, which was ornamental. For pinguis, cf. Verg. Georg. iv. 118, pingues hortos.

16. cryptoporticus. A covered cloister or portico. The word is a hybrid, and only occurs in Pliny. This building differed from the ordinary porticus in not being supported on columns, but closed at the sides. The word extenditur shows that it was a rectilinear, not a circular building.

prope publici operis, “almost large enough to be a public building.” As it was for walking exercise, length would be a special feature. Cf. Hor. Od. ii. 15, 14, nulla decempedis | metata privatis opacam | porticus excipiebat arcton.

serenus dies et inmotus, cf. Tacit. Hist. i. 86, sereno et inmoto die. Inmotus in prose is post-Augustan.

17. xystus, “a terrace walk,” cf. v. 6, 16, ante porticum xystus in plurimas species distinctus concisusque buxo.

violis. Violets and roses were the chief garden flowers among the Romans.

quantumque caloris etc. “The warmth it gives in front is only equalled by the coolness it gives behind.”

18. nam ante meridiem etc. In the morning when the sun shone on the north-east side of the cryptoporticus, the xystus on the south-west side afforded a shady walk; at midday, when the sun shone directly on the roof of the cryptoporticus, the building itself was in the shade, and in the afternoon, when the sun shone on the south-west of the cryptoporticus, the nearest part of the garden and gestatio on the north-east side of the building was in the shade. The gestationis proximam partem was probably the vinea which adjoined the gestatio.

19. transmittitque. “‘Circulates’ by means of the north-eastern windows.”

20. in capite xysti, etc. “At the head of the terrace and portico successively (deinceps) is a garden suite of rooms.” The xystus and cryptoporticus were parallel, and the diaeta was at the extremity of the former and extended also (deinceps) to the extremity of the latter. This seems the only possible explanation of deinceps. Keil brackets cryptoporticus horti, and the omission of these words would certainly make the passage easier.

amores mei, “my favourite,” cf. Cic. ad Att. ii, 19, Pompeius, nostri amores; ibid. xvi. 6, Piliae salutem dices et Atticae, deliciis atque amoribus meis; and frequently elsewhere in Cicero.

in hac heliocaminus etc. “In this (diaeta) is a sunny chamber, which looks on the terrace on one side, the sea on another, and the sun on both; also an apartment, which looks on the portico through folding-doors, and on the sea through a window.”

21. contra parietem medium. “In the middle of the wall,” i.e. of the cubiculum.

zotheca...recedit. Cf. v. 6, 38, mox zothecula refugit quasi in cubiculum. The zotheca was an alcove or recess in a room, used for privacy. The word occurs only in Pliny, and in Sidonius Apollinaris, but it has also been found in a Tiburtine inscription, and also in a Reatine one quoted by Corte. Some say that zotheca originally meant a den for wild beasts, on no good grounds that I can discover. I much prefer Scheffer’s suggestion that zotheca is formed on the analogy of ζωγράφος, a painter, and probably meant a place adorned with paintings and sculpture.

cathedras. “Easy chairs.” They appear to have had backs.

a pedibus mare etc. As you lay on the couch on your side you had the sea at your feet, the neighbouring villas behind you, and the woods at your head.

tot facies locorum etc. “All these views may be looked at separately from each window, or blended into one prospect.”

corruptus, "brackish." This is the reading of the Florentine, Dresden, and Riccardian MSS., also of the Editio Princeps and the Aldine Edition. Salsus is the reading of the Medicean and Vatican MSS., and also of the Editio Romana. It is more probable that salsus is a gloss on corruptus, than that corruptus is a gloss on salsus.

26. suggerunt adfatim. For a similar phrase cf. ii. 8, 1.

vicus. What this village was we do not know. Had it been the decayed town of Laurentum, Pliny would probably have mentioned it by name.

una villa discernit. "Separated only by one residence from my own."

balinea meritoria, "public baths," i.e. which you hired. Cf. meritoria (cenacula) Juv. iii. 234.

27. nunc continua etc. Continua does not mean that the villas were built together without a break, but that they were built close to each other. Translate, "Now in close succession, now at great intervals."

quod non nunquam etc., "a long spell of calm weather often softens or loosens the sand on the shore, oftener this sand is hardened by the constant beating of the waves." Some editors take mollit as="makes easy to walk on," quoting Caesar Bell. Gall. vii. 46, quicquid huic circuitus ad molliendum clivum accesserat. Indurat will then mean "makes difficult," a sense for which I can find no authority. This interpretation has evidently arisen from ignorance of the fact that water hardens sand.

28. squillas. In Juv. v. 81, squilla means a lobster. In Hor. Sat. ii. 4, 58, it means a prawn. Here it may mean either.

29. inhabitare. Late Latin.

ut tot tantisque dotibus, "that the many great charms of my little home may be enhanced in the highest degree by your company." For dotibus in a similar connection, cf. i. 24, 5.

XVIII.

1. About Junius Mauricus, see i. 5, 10, note.

preceptorem. It was not a private tutor that Mauricus required, as the succeeding context shows, but a public teacher of rhetoric, whose lectures his nephews might attend.

fratris. L. Junius Arulenus Rusticus. About him, see i. 5, 2 note, also i. 15, where Pliny, at the request of Mauricus, recommends a husband for the daughter of Arulenus.

resumo. Occurs only in the poets and post-Augustan prose.

2. loquebantur, i.e. iuvenes.

ordinis nostri, i.e. senatorial. Grown-up people frequently attended these lectures.

probe discere, "attend the lectures with advantage." Probe means without getting harm to their manners or character from such associates.

3. profitentur, "teach." This absolute use of the verb is post-Augustan. Cf. iv. 11, 1, audistine Valerium Licinianum in Sicilia profiteri? Ibid, Sec. 14, translatus est in Siciliam ubi nunc profitetur. For the Ciceronian use, cf. Tuscul. ii. 4, quod in eo ipso peccet, cuius profitetur scientiam. Ibid. artem-que vitae professus, delinquit in vita. The noun professor, occurring in Pliny twice, and in Quintilian besides, is also post-Augustan, and was used especially of a public teacher of rhetoric, but was extended to teachers of any liberal art, quite in our modern sense.

4. magis...amares, "love them more than if they were your own." Gierig, who cannot see how a man can love children more than if they were his own, would not understand liberi after tui. The sense would then be, "than that your children, I would say your wards (tui) did you not love them more than as a guardian," etc. But this meaning is forced, and what Gierig objects to is only a very common hyperbole.

XVIII.

Cerialis may be Velius Cerialis, to whom iv. 21, about the death of the sisters Helvidiae, is addressed.

addubitem. The preposition here has an intensive force, as the word vehementer shows. Cf. x. 119; also Roby §§ 1834, 1835.

2. ut quas. Corte and Gierig read ut quae, referring to impetum caloremque; but nomen should also be included by ut quae, and if so, it will go awkwardly with the succeeding words; if not included, the omission will be as awkward. Besides, if ut quae be read, the clause ad hoc dicentis, etc., becomes meaningless.

iudicum consessus. The usual phrase for the bench of judges. Cic. Pro. Mil. 1, non enim corona consessus vester cinctus est.

advocatorum. Here the word means the friends of the plaintiff or defendant, who supported them by their presence.

non unius actoris. Several pleaders, of course, might appear on each side.

incessus, discursus. The Roman orator did not stand in the one place, but moved to and fro. Gesner aptly quotes Quintil. xi. 3, 126, procursio opportuna, brevis, moderata, rara. conveniet etiam ambulatio quaedam propter immodicas laudationum moras. quamquam Cicero (Orat. 18) rarum incessum neque ita longum probat. discursare vero ineptissimum: urbaneque Flavius Verginius interrogavit de quodam suo antisophiste, quot milia passuum declamasset?

3. sedentes agunt. This was done in unimportant cases. Quint. xi. 3, 134, nam et fere fit hoc in rebus minoribus. In § 135 Quint. gives some of the disadvantages of sitting while pleading.

4. pronuntiationis, "expression." Quint. xi. 3, 1, pronuntiatio a plerisque actio dicitur, sed prius nomen a voce, sequens a gestu videtur accipere.

oculi, manus. For the use of the eyes and hands in oratory, Cf. Quint. xi. 3, 75, and 85.

intentio, i. 3, 2, note.

convincere, "to prove to be so."

inesse repetundarum legi quod postularem. "That my accusation was covered by the law against extortion." Catan. supposes that Pliny's speech is the one delivered against Marius Priscus.

colligendum fuit, "all this I had to infer, not only from the law itself, but also from a comparison of it with others."

9. adhibituri, i. 5, 4, note.

plane... examina tecum, "by all means weigh in your mind."

adhuc an sit recitandum, "whether there is any longer a reason for reciting." For adhuc cf. ii. 10, 2, note.

calculos pone, "place on either side all the considerations I have raised." For the phrase cf. i. 14, 9, note.

a te enim ratio, etc. "For a reason is required from you (because it is you who urge me to recite); compliance with your request will be my apology."

XX.

About Calvisius see i. 12, 12, note. About Regulus cf. i. 5.

1. Assem para, "get ready your copper." Pliny here uses the language of a strolling mountebank.

2. Verania Pisonis, i.e. uxor, a common elision, especially in poetry. After her husband was beheaded she sought out and purchased his head from the murderers for sepulture. Tacit. Hist. i. 47. Plut. Galba 28.

graviter iacebat, cf. v. 9, 2, Iulius Valens graviter iacet. The word is often used absolutely like cubare, in the sense of "lying ill." Cic. ad Fam. ix. 20, ne ego, te iacente, bona tua comedim.

Galba adoptavit. Tacit. Hist. i. 14, 15. Sueton. Galba 17.

impudentiam hominis. "Mark the impudence of the fellow."

3. esto, si venit. "That might pass if he had only visited her."

componit vultum, "he puts on a grave look." Componere vultum means to adjust the countenance to a certain look, the look varying according to the context in which the phrase occurs. Cf. iii. 16, 5, siccis oculis composito vultu redibat; vii.

computat. For the Roman habit of reckoning with the fingers see Professor Mayor's Note on Juvenal x. 249. Units and tens were counted on the left hand, hundreds on the right.

climactericum tempus. Climacter meant a critical time, after an interval of so many years, when some great change was supposed to come upon a person. The most important climacteric years were the 7th and 9th, or any multiple of either. The 63rd year was regarded as very important, being a multiple of the two climacterics, 7 and 9. Cf. Aul. Gell. iii. 10, pericula vitae fortunarumque hominum, quae climacteras Chaldaei appellant, gravissima quaeque fieri affirmat septenariis; ibid. xv. 7, observatum in multa hominum memoria, expertumque est in senioribus plerisque omnibus sexagesimum tertium vitae annum cum periculo et clade aliqua venire. propterea, qui rerum verborumque istiusmodi studio tenentur, eum aetatis annum appellant κλιμακτηρικόν. Regulus, of course, professes to calculate the climacteric from Verania's horoscope, not from the date of her birth. Otherwise there would have been no mystery necessary, as the woman herself could have calculated whether this year was a 7th, 9th, etc.

5. codicillos. Here simply tablets. Cf. ii. 16, 1.

ingravescit. "She grows worse." The word is more commonly used of the disease, as in i. 12, 5, but is here by a natural extension applied to the person suffering. There is no necessity to suppose with Scheffer that morbis has dropped out.

qui sibi peierasset. Veranias' words reported, not Pliny's.

6. in caput detestatur. Regulus professed great love for his son, and therefore such an invocation as this was supposed to add to the solemnity of his oath; detestari means to pray that an evil consequence may be averted from oneself to some one else. Regulus' wickedness was therefore twofold; he knew that he was committing perjury, yet he constantly invoked the consequences of it on his son's head.

7. Blaesus. The family of the Blaesii was very distinguished, and is frequently mentioned by Tacitus. Junius Blaesus was uncle of Sejanus, had commanded three legions in Pannonia, and also been pro-consul of Africa in the reign of Tiberius. He was poisoned by Vitellius. His son, Junius Blaesus, held the military tribunate, and was also governor of Gallia Lugdunensis. Tacitus (Ann. vi. 40) mentions two brothers Blaesi, who had held priesthoods and been deprived of them by Tiberius, and who committed suicide. One of these was the last mentioned, and they were both sons of the first mentioned Junius Blaesus.

novis tabulis, "an alteration of the will." Tabulae novae also means a cancelling of debts. There is no allusion to that meaning in the present passage, as Corte thinks.

captare. The usual word for legacy hunting. Cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 5, which is a complete exposition of the arts of the captator. Cf. iv. 2, 2, where Regulus is said to have played the captator to his own son.

8. vertit adlocutionem, "he altered his tone"; adlocutio in the sense of "address" post-Augustan.

bona morte, "an easy death." For the opposite, cf. iii. 16, 11; efficere ut male moriar: bona morte is the reading of MSS. Med. and Vatic. : for the construction cf. i. 10, 12, note.

9. scholastica lege, etc. Catan. takes scholastica lege as = more otiosorum, and tertiam as = aliam, and Forcellini, following him, explains thus:—lege et more otiosorum hominum aliam insuper poscis? i.e. do you, after the custom of idle men, demand one more story? But scholasticus can hardly be used as = σχολαῖος, nor can tertiam be simply = aliam. The passage evidently refers to the rule insisted on by some rhetoricians that every speech should be divided into three parts, a rule of which Quintilian disapproves; cf. Inst. Or. iv. 5, 3, quapropter ne illos quidem probaverim qui partitionem vetant ultra tres propositiones extendere; and he adds, (partitio) hoc tamen numero velut lege non est alliganda, cum possit causa plures desiderare. For scholasticus cf. i. 24, 4, note; ii. 3, 5.

10. pulcherrimas tunicas. The Romans wore two tunicae, an under and an upper. Corte says it was the custom for people on the point of death to adorn themselves with handsome garments. But here we need only suppose that Aurelia had dressed specially for the ceremony of will making. The falsi. The tampering with or forgery of wills was one of the commonest kinds of fraud at Rome. It was provided against by the Lex Cornelia Testamentaria of Sulla, which applied to any one qui testamentum quodve aliud instrumentum falsum sciens dolo malo scripserit, recitaverit, subiecerit, suppresserit, amoverit, resignaverit, deleverit. The quaestio falsi was one of the quaestiones perpetuae in Sulla's time. Various subsequent enactments about the same matter were passed. Nero (Sueton. Nero 17) ordained ne quis alieni testamenti scriptor legatum sibi adscriberet. Did Regulus evade the law by dictating?
